Wednesday, April 25, 2007

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Tina M. Walters. I am the daughter of the property owner west of your proposed electrical substation site ref. # 07-0171-EL-BTX.

I am opposed to this action. There are alternatives that would work better.

Thank you,

Tina M. Walters

PO Box 764

Middlefield, Ohio 44062

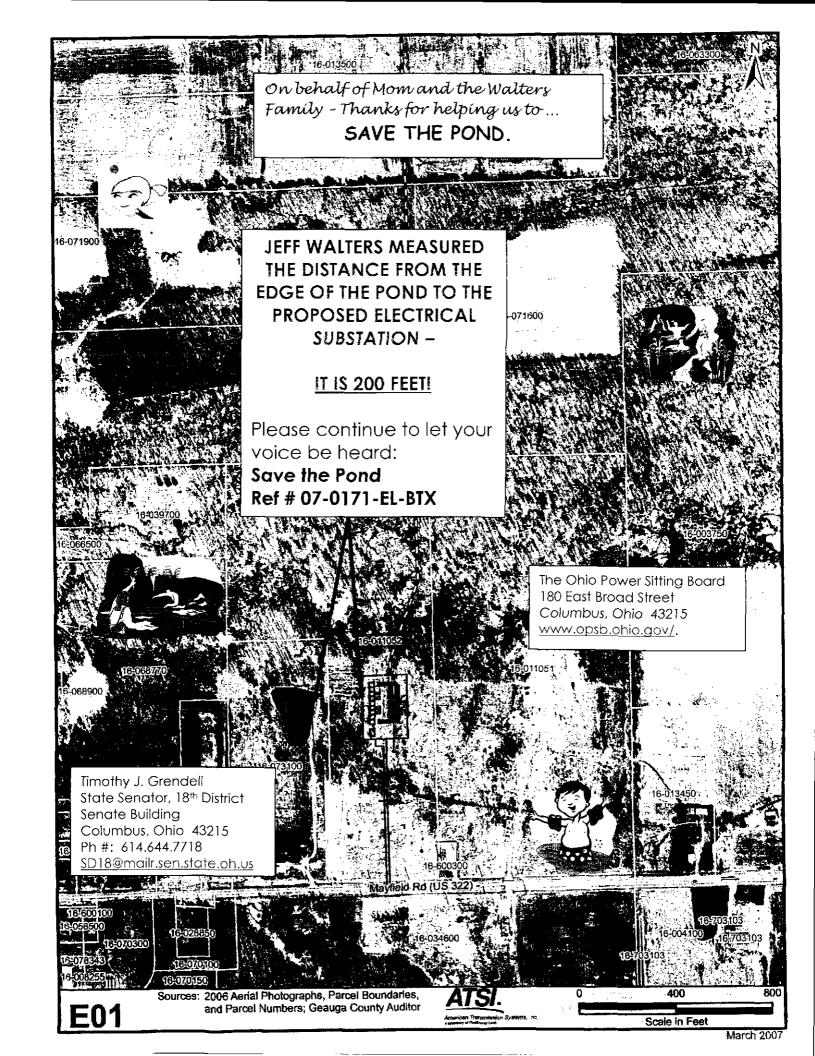

Jina. M. Walters

tinawltrs@yahoo.com

. L.

RECEIVED-DOCKETING DIV
2007 JUN 19 AM ID: 47
PUCO

This is to certify that the images appearing are as accurate and complete reproduction of a case file document delivered in the regular course of business Date Processed Lo 190

The proposed substation location will be placed only 200 feet from the edge of the pond. Jeff measured it. I am emailing the reporter for a correction today.

Path of power lines has folks in Geauga County charged up

FirstEnergy plan orings out hundreds vho object to route

ACHEL DISSELL lain Dealer Reporter

IONTVILLE TOWNSHIP on Miller's fluorescent vellow pirt shouted how dim he thinks ne prospect is of power lines beig run 100 feet from his front orch in Thompson Township.

The back of the shirt is emblaaned with the proposed Clay treet landscape, dominated by a tassive strip of power poles and cented with dollar signs.

Miller, along with hundreds of sidents whose property could e affected by two proposed ansmission line routes, packed Saturday morning meeting in iontville Township.

"We are being asked to sacrice our past, present and future heritage for a few select commerclal businesses," Miller said.

A FirstEnergy Corp. subsidiary says the routes, which will consist of 75-foot-tall poles, is necessary to bolster power to central Geauga and Ashtabula counties.

The routes targeted by the company start at an existing power line near the border of Geauga and Lake counties and run 10 to 12 miles south to a new power substation on U.S. 322. One path follows Clay Street; the other cuts across a swath of land east of Ohio 528.

The proposed new substation is especially worrisome for the Walters family of Huntsburg Township.

Walters' pond, on the back end of their property off U.S. 322, has been home to Girl Scout and Boy Scout gatherings, church outings and family get-togethers for three decades.

The family even built a pavilion that community groups can use for free.

The proposed substation ergy representative attended the would tower about 150 yards from the pond where visitors usually park, Tina Walters said.

"I got married there." Tina Walters said. She said her mother, Lucille, was devastated when she got a letter in the mail about the substation.

Most at the meeting agreed that others in the county deserve better electrical stability, but they want FirstEnergy to alter the paths of the lines or use existing pathways to run the lines.

Jim Galm, an electrical engineer whose family's nearly century-old farm in Huntsburg could be affected, said he drove the route of the existing lines.

He said existing rights-of-way and, possibly, existing lines that run to the Chesterfield Township substation should be examined.

Trustees from the three affected townships expressed their concerns but asked the residents along the two routes not to turn against each other. No FirstEnmeeting.

State Sen. Timothy Grendell, a Republican from Chesterland. told the crowd he already has written a letter to FirstEnergy expressing his opposition to the Clay Street line and urging the company to look for more undeveloped land farther east.

Grendell outlined the process the power company has to go through with the state Power Siting Board. The next step is a formal application to be filed in late April or early May.

Grendell urged residents to make their opposition known with letters, calls and e-mails to the company and board. He and other politicians are setting up a meeting with the company to discuss other possible routes.

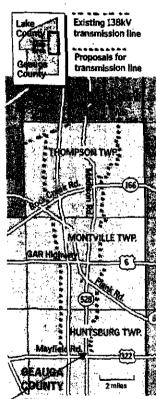

Grendell, a lawyer, said he would represent the three townships for free in front of the state board.

To reach this Plain Dealer reporter: rdisself@plaind.com, 216-999-4121

LONNIETIMMONS III | PLAIN DEALER

Hundreds of people, including Cynthia Farced of Montville Township, attended a public meeting Saturday in Montville to hear about FirstEnergy Corp.'s proposal to erect poles and run power lines through three townships in eastern Geauga County.

THE PLAIN DEALE

Timothy J. Grendell State Senator, 18th District Senate Building Columbus, Ohio 43215 Phone #: 614.644.7718 Fax: 614.466.7662

SD18@mailr.sen.state.oh.us

See Tim Grendell's letter to CEO of First Energy.

All you need to do is email, write, or call and say you oppose the location of the proposed electrical substation and power lines Case # 07-0171-EL-BTX. It's as easy as that! Thank you......The Walters Family

This is where the pond is located.