Dear Ms. Jenkins:

On behalf of Eastern Natural Gas Company, Pike Natural Gas Company, and Southeastern Natural Gas Company, I am submitting as late filed Exhibits Company Exhibits 1, 2 and 3, respectively, in these cases. These three Exhibits contain affidavits of publication indicating that notice of the November 13, 2007 hearing was in fact published in various newspapers of general circulation throughout the service territory of each of these three companies.

With this filing, these cases are now ready for Commission disposition.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

Stephen M. Howard

Ohio State again is nation's largest university

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio State University is the nation's largest public university for the second year in a row, new enrollment figures show.

The school's main campus in Columbus has 52,568 undergraduate, graduate and professional students this fall, 750 more than last year. University of Florida at Gainesville is second with 51,876 students, and Arizona State University at Tempe is the third with 51,481.

University officials credit most of the increase in enrollment to an increase in transfer students and higher first-year student retention levels. This year, the school projects just over 94 percent of first-year students will continue to their sophomore year, up from 78 percent a decade ago.

Congressional control won't go easily to Ohio Democrats

By JULIE CARR SMYTH
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

COLUMBUS (AP) — After a tumultuous 59 days in which three members of Ohio's Republican congressional delegation have retired and a fourth has died, the Democrats' goal of taking back the majority of Ohio seats in Congress may look like a cake walk.

Not so fast. Three of the vacated seats are in longtime GOP strongholds, and Republicans have not given up hope for retaining the fourth, Rep. Deborah Pryce's central Ohio seat, using the prowess of their Ohio political operation.

In the pro-Democratic climate left over from 2006, Republicans even entertain the idea of picking off freshman Democrat Zack Space, who represents the district once served by imprisoned ex-Rep. Bob Ney.

Ken Spain, press secretary for the National Republican Congressional Committee, said he doesn't believe the retirements of Reps. Ralph Regula and David Hobson and the death of veteran Rep. Paul Gillmor have left the GOP vulnerable in these areas.

Regula's district is anchored in Canton in northeast Ohio. Hobson's is from Springfield in western Ohio and Regula served a northwest Ohio district.

"If you take a look at those districts, all of them have proven to be reliably Republican in the past," Spain said. "Any Democrat attempting to compete in these reliably Republican districts in a presidential year will find themselves in an uphill battle."

In the anti-incumbent atmosphere expected to color the 2008 elections, open seats where three representatives ranging in age from 68 to 82 once served may actually end up being a plus for the party.

Democrats believe, however, that defending the seats that Gillmor, Hobson and Regula handily won election after election will make a significant dent in the GOP's campaign reserves.

At the end of August, the National Republican Congressional Committee had spent nearly all of the $34.6 million it has raised during the cycle, reporting only $1.6 million cash on hand and $4 million in debt, according to federal filings. The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee had banked more than $22 million of the $44 million it raised and was about $3 million in debt.

"Ohio is shaping up to be one of Republicans' biggest problems this cycle," said Ryan Kudomier, Midwest spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "In fact, the NRCC spent more money in a single Ohio district last cycle than they have in the bank today."

Still, Ohio is home to some of the most politically generous Republicans in the nation and ones that never shy away from an expensive fight. On balance,

Ohio's vacated congressional districts

These are the districts that have lost incumbent Republican representatives in recent days:

6th District, northwest Ohio
Was represented by Rep. Paul Gillmor
Departure: Died Sept. 5
Political index: 67.06 percent Republican
7th District, southern Ohio
Represented by Rep. David Hobson
Departure: Retiring at the end of 2008
Political index: 63.24 percent Republican
16th District, central Ohio
Represented by Rep. Deborah Pryce
Departure: Retiring at the end of 2008
Political index: 67.78 percent Republican
15th District, northeast Ohio
Represented by Rep. Ralph Regula
Departure: Retiring at the end of 2008
Political index: 60.27 percent Republican

there has traditionally been more Republican giving in the state than Democratic giving at nearly every level, according to historical data compiled by the nonpartisan Center for State Politics.

Rudominer said many of the Democratic candidates being recruited to vie for vacated Republican seats will benefit from the popularity of Democratic Gov. Ted Strickland. He said the Ohio Democratic Party's reputation as financially strapped and disorganized is a thing of the past.

Last year, for example, Strickland won the majority of votes in the most populous county in Regula's district, Stark County, which his party believes bodes well for Democratic state Rep. John Bossett in his bid to replace Ohio's oldest representative.

"Democrats have learned how to win in the Midwest," he said. "Obviously, Ted Strickland is doing a terrific job now and a lot of these candidates we're seeing recruited to run in 2008 fit that Ted Strickland mold in terms of their positions on issues."

Regarding the Pryce district, Republicans have yet to recruit a candidate to run against Pryce's unsuccessful 2006 opponent, Democrat Mary Jo Kilroy, a Franklin County commissioner.

Democrats view the district, drawn to lean slightly Republican, as one of their best chances at gaining a seat again next year. They had also targeted Regula's seat, and the seats of Cincinnati-area Reps. Jean Schmidt and Steve Chabot.
