Notes:

You keep asking for written proof from consumers that lower rates have been offerd to them by their Utility, but I never have seen where you have asked the Utility to provide you the information they offered to developers and builders. Why don't you ask the builders for the "Deals" the Utility gave them in the 70"s as I am sure they would have something in their files on their deals. Maybe the builders should be giving back their incentives they received to build all electric homes. You have been very quite on the builders role. Why only penealize the consumer.? I am sure by now you know there were deals given and should be hononed by the utility. When private business makes a deal with a customer and it turns out to be a bad deal for the company they have to eat it in their profits. Why not the same for FirstEnergy?
