COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

A Cleveland Plain Dealer newspaper article on Oct. 12 regarding PUCO hearings on all-electric rates alludes to the fact that the difference between discounted rates and the true cost is now made up by other rate payers. It is too bad that all electric customers will have to start paying more for electricity, but I don't feel I should pay more to subsidize their usage. Many years ago I built an all electric home knowing that my electric bills would be higher than with gas, and as soon as gas became available, I paid to have gas run to my property. I paid to have gas available and nobody subsidized my costs. One option which saved me a lot of money when I had all electric was a demand-meter, which I utilized to the max. Do not allow my electric co. to raise my rates to pay for someone elses usage. This is not fair.
