Dear sir or madam,

I am far more interested in green energy than energy from oil and coal.

I have lived in a city that is somewhat smoggy for twenty three years. I have had ~~that~~ neighbors and students with respiratory issues over the years.

No one should have to pay for Duke's mess but Duke. It is quite likely that the only way to motivate Duke to stop polluting might be financial. If it will cost Duke too much money to keep doing things the same way, Duke might get interested in green energy.

Sincerely,

Dorothy Jones

This bailout would cause everyone's rates to increase regardless of the energy company people use. People should not have to fund Duke's dirty coal plants. I care about saving money on my electric bills and reducing pollution by using clean energy. We need Duke Energy to be held accountable to their customers and the communities they serve.

Dear Sirs,

I realize that energy supply is a complicated issue and that it is easier to keep doing what we have been doing than to try something new. However, there is never an easy time to change, and if we don't have the courage to be more creative now, there may not be another chance.

I would like to support research into clean energy, as well as efforts to reduce energy consumption in our state. If some of the waste could be eliminated from our homes and business, the power companies and citizens would both benefit, as with the Energy Star program.

Please reconsider your support of outdated coal technology, and put environmental concerns above profits.

Sincerely,

Susan Rodgers
