Public Utilities Commission of Ohio 180 E. Broad St. Columbus, OH 43215

Dear PUCO:

Please consider voting "no" on FirstEnergy's request for a rate increase to support its Davis-Besse nuclear and W.H. Sammis power plants. Why should Ohio rate payers be required to compensate First Energy for using the steady profits from its regulated companies to cover losses at these two unregulated power plants, as well as to prop up corporate profits? Why should we be forced to pay for power from First Energy's old, expensive power generation plants instead of buying cheaper (and potentially cleaner) energy from the open market?

As a lifelong Northeast Ohio resident, I and my family have paid dearly for the development of First Energy's Perry Nuclear Power Plant. My cousin helped built the North Perry plant. He witnessed CEI's astounding waste of money during the plant building process. A decade later, I worked for CEI at the Perry plant as a summer intern, and I saw the company's continued wasteful spending. It's not fair that rate payers should pay for this waste.

I also am conflicted about supporting nuclear energy by paying my First Energy electric bills. We haven't figured out how to safely dispose of nuclear waste from the plant. However, at the minimum, nuclear energy is relatively safe for the environment. Coal-burning plants, such as Sammis, are not.

I also ask the PUCO to consider backing efforts to reinstate Ohio's renewable energy standard requirements and the proposed national Clean Power Plan. I thought Ohio finally was on the road to supporting wind and solar electricity generation, and then Gov. John Kasich decided to roll back our state's renewable energy standard requirements. I believe that we all—including Ohio's energy companies—should reduce, reuse and recycle. Renewable energy has saved Ohio rate payers more than $1 billion and created 25,000 jobs over the last five years, according to Environmental Defense Fund. Why would we want to reverse this trend now?

Sincerely yours,

Dear PUCO,

I'm writing this short note to let you know that, as a teacher, scientist, and consumer, I'm against the proposal for continued support of Ohio's outdated, highly polluting coal-based energy generating plants. The continued support of these plants, subsidized by consumers of FirstEnergy, does not make sense.

What I am in support of is the development and implementation of more modern, efficient ways to combust coal, while minimizing environmental pollution. What we all (consumers and shareholders alike) need is coal plant design and operation that is more energy efficient and limits the produced amounts of SOx, NOx, CO, CO2, mercury, heavy metals, and particulates. This can be accomplished through the use of improved scrubbers and newer methods for molecular capture/conversion, and the implementation of control methods to limit the expression of pollutants in general.

Saving the aging coal plants merely trades the health of our people and our planet for financial gain. I would rather not have my money put toward this cause. I would rather use my hard-earned dollars to support the research, development, engineering design, construction, and implementation of environmentally sound coal plants, along with the continued development of alternative energy generation means, such as solar, wind, geothermal, and clean waste to energy conversion. The world's needs are changing, and we have the ability to be more efficient and pollute less. Let's put our 21st Century technology to work!

Thank you for your support!

Sincerely,

Dear PUCO,

Please refuse First Energy and Duke's request for a financial bailout of their outdated power generation facilities.

Renewable energy standards are essential to the wellbeing of every individual. I do not believe a decision of whether or not these freezes should continue should be based on the financials of a company. This is an issue that is affecting all citizens and I do not trust a company to make the right decision, as they have their own worries. However, these are selfish worries in the grand scheme of things. It is time for them to take responsibility for the pollution that they have created and will continue to create.

The US ranks the highest in the world for percentage of citizens that have clinical asthma. That is a pretty sad figure for such a developed country, that a mere 300 years ago was wild, free, untamed wilderness. I care a lot about this country and this planet, and I have been upset at government decisions bending to the will of large companies.

It is disturbing to see these companies dispute, halt, repeal, and buy off proenvironmental regulations that are proposed by the government. I would like to see more decisions based on what is right and good for the people, and less on what the lobbyists are asking for their companies. I hope that my words are heard, and I hope that the final decision made by PUCO that affects not only the future of an energy company, but also the future of our planet and its population, rests easy with you. Please do not put these regulations off any longer. We, the citizens, have waited long enough!

Re: FirstEnergy

It is my understanding that FirstEnergy intends to raise utility prices instead of seeking clean alternatives to their inefficient, out-of-date coal-powered plants. I, of course, have no interest in seeing my rates go up for any reason, but I object especially when the reasons are what they are and will result in more air pollution, which will, in turn, contribute to global warming. As it was recently put to me (and I concur), I should not have to pay to help FirstEnergy (or any of their competitors) continue to pollute my air rather than seek clean, up-to-date alternative energy sources.

I am writing to express my concern about the plans submitted by First Energy and Duke utility companies requesting financial support for their most outdated and expensive coal plants. I care about this issue because I want to reduce air pollution and urge out utilities to provide cleaner energy sources for our electricity.

If approved, their plan would not encourage these companies to reduce carbon emissions and would cause our rates to increase. It does not make sense for us to have to pay First Energy to continue polluting our air with outdated technology.

I urge you not to approve their plan.

Dear PUCO,

I don't think FirstEnergy should be allowed to ask their customers to pay for a bailout of their old outdated coal-fired plants. First Energy should be investing in clean, renewable energy sources, not these old polluting plants. It makes no sense to me why they think it is good idea to spend the money they receive from their customers on obsolete technology. As a public utility they should be held accountable first to their customers, not their shareholders. A financial bailout is only going to result in higher rates for everyone, regardless of where we buy our electricity.

I strongly urge you to deny First Energy's request to bailout these coal-fired plants and instead encourage them to retire these plants and invest in newer energy technology.
