Dear Sir/Madam:

This letter is to express my opposition to the bailout of Duke Energy's outdated coal plants.

First Energy and Duke Energy need to reduce the carbon emissions from the outdated coal fired plants. Instead of passing the costs on to the consumers like myself, the energy companies need to take some responsibility and use company profits and capital reserves to build more efficient plants.

The newer and more efficient plants would save costs in the long run and also help the environment. Almost all energy consumers are tired of the energy company continually passing on many costs to the consumer that the company should also bear some responsibility.

Please deny the financial bailout of the outdated plants that First Energy and Duke Energy are submitting plans for.

Sincerely,

Richard L. Kiefer

To the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio

I'm a big advocate of reducing pollution and would very much like to see more cost effective and environmentally friendly sources for energy.

I don't believe the consumers should continue to support these outdated and pollution promoting facilities.

I believe Federal standards should be established so that everyone is accountable for the impact our resources and decisions effect on our environment.

Sincerely,

Katy Wayne

To Whom It May Concern (i.e., PUCO)

I am very concerned about the current direction of Duke Energy as it relates to the lack of development and use of renewable energy resources. This issue is of paramount importance to our state's and country's future. Continuing to utilize carbon-based energies, specifically coal, is counter to the need to reduce our carbon footprint and clean-air. Not only is Duke planning to ask that we pay for more outdated technology, but our children will be paying a far greater price with poor health, changing environment, and much higher expense to fix later. The resources being requested by Duke Energy should be placed against development of renewable-energy sources, not coal plants.

Thank you,
Robert Wilson

Dear PUCO, 14-0841-EL-SSO 10/21/14

I do not agree to bailing out Duke's coal plants. My daughter worked at one (hired by an outside agency) to teach English to undocumented workers from Latin America. These people worked 7 days a week abating lead and asbestos, no days off, no sick days, until the group was deported and a new one brought in.

Duke Energy should be held accountable for their unethical and illegal activities, not given a reward. Sincerely,

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to urge you to deny Duke Energy's request to continue to purchase power from their old coal plants. There is already too much air pollution in the Ohio Valley and this continuation would only add to it. I would certainly like my grandchildren to grow up with cleaner air. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

To Whom It May Concern:

First Energy is working in Ohio to make customers pay for their old coal plants. I care about this issue because I want to reduce air pollution, save money on my electric bill and urge our utilities to provide cleaner energy sources for our electricity. My family and I should not have to pay for First Energy to continue polluting our air with this outdated technology.
