COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

RE Case No: 14-1297-EL-SSO I am opposed to First Energy's proposal to force its customers to guarantee revenues to its 55-year old Sammis coal plant in Stratton, Ohio, through 2031. The proposal would force its customers to pay all operating costs along with guaranteed profits to its subsidiary, FirstEnergy Solutions. The proposed charges are designed to eliminate all of the competitive market risks for FirstEnergy Solutions, the owner of the coal-burning units at Sammis (as well as the nuclear facility Davis-Besse), by forcing those risks onto the monthly electric bills of FirstEnergy's monopolized customers. First Energy's assertion that this plan would ultimately save money for consumers is based on purely speculative assumptions about future energy costs. This proposal is bad for electricity consumers, bad for business and bad for the environment. First Energy, not its customers, would derive all benefits from this proposal. It's not right and it's not fair.
