Public Utilities Commission of Ohio:

Please deny the rate increase to lock consumers into buying power from Ohio's oldest, dirtiest coal plants. Coal plants make people sick and when people get sick, they can't pay bills, if you increase rates, its only hurting you. We pay too much for power now. You get richer and we get more poor. So to keep people well we need to stop paying more. Those people that have to work with coal, get sick. You're not just hurting people all over you're hurting employees you employ. Coal gets in the air people breathe and sticks in their lungs. Stop increasing rates and leave it where it is. We need to have money to support our families.

Dear Public Utilities Commission of Ohio,

RE: Case number 14-1297-EL-SSO

I believe it is of utmost importance that we take every opportunity to reduce pollution and wisely invest in our future. Providing a bailout to outdated power plants in the form of mandated rate increases does little to accomplish that goal. Public funding, taxes and consumer expense should be focused on developing power sources which are economical, sustainable and clean. Requiring citizens to pay more out of pocket to sustain outdated power companies when better, cheaper and cleaner options exist makes little sense. Please focus the efforts of Ohio and the money of its constituents to creating solutions rather than promoting outdated technology and pollution.

Thank You.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this letter to voice my opinion on the potential crises that may take place if the Energy Companies are able to continue to raise prices in passing the buck on to consumers such as my family. I am referring to case # 14-1297-EL-SSO pertaining to FirstEnergy's request to impose a rate hike to cover the costs of their outdated and inefficient coal plants to the consumer.

I believe that we should be provided a choice when selecting the source of our energy and that we should be able to obtain it while being environmentally aware and responsible. I want my child to grow up knowing that it is important to be a responsible citizen in doing your part, but we have, for too long, been the victims of having these energy companies imposing new fees to the consumer when they should be responsible as a corporate citizen in investing in the future of our children and everyone else in our country.

I believe that clean air is a necessity and a right and that ALL people should have the ability to breathe easy every day and every night without having to worry about paying for something that should be covered by accrued funds throughout the prior years.

Thank you for your RE-consideration on this issue.

Dear Commissioners:

I write today to oppose the proposals of First Energy, Duke Energy, and AEP that would allow them to raise their rates and use those profits to cover the costs of their outdated coal plants and the Davis Besse nuclear power plant.

Ohio had the opportunity to move boldly into the clean energy future when it passed SB 221 in 2008. That bright future has been gutted, and now Ohio is moving backward rather than forward. These new proposals to retain outdated power generation facilities will cost Ohioans economically and environmentally, and clearly represent another step backward.

Please move Ohio forward into the future of clean power generation rather than cling to the past. Please deny these proposals by First Energy, Duke Energy, and AEP. Ohio residential and business consumers of electricity deserve your consideration.

RE: Case No. 14-1297-EL-SSO

Dear Sir or Madam:

Please be advised that as an energy efficient consumer, I find it appalling and futile for your department to exercise any further efforts in rescuing and maintaining coal plants in today's modern world.

Firstly, I believe that doing so is not cost-effective, and that this exorbitant expense would simply result in a trickle-down effect to the consumers, who, by in large, have a reasonable right to oppose such a widely spread bailout of a company still using coal to provide energy. I mean, who wants to sustain an increased electric bill in order to support the continued usage of obsolete natural resources? Not to mention that the use of coal is a major contributor to air pollution.

Secondly, if the use of coal to provide energy today was a cost-effective means, then it would be bound to create its own profit, and therefore not require any form of bailout. In this, I find a bailout equal to attempting to save a sinking ship that has sustained far too much damage to be rescued.

My family and I are aware of how quickly we are ruining our planet, and we strongly oppose your consideration in aiding to bail out companies who rely on resources that are counterproductive to the efforts of cleaning up our only place to live. Your department should be focused on the larger picture, which includes the overall safety, health and longevity of future generations of society, rather than contribute to a failing effort. My strong opinion is: If you're not part of the solution, then you're part of the problem. So, why would you ever choose to be part of the problem?

Please consider NOT bailing out the coal plants. They had their chance...Let's move on...

Thank You.

Please deny the rate increase that locks consumers into buying power from Ohio's oldest, dirtiest coal plants. The threats to health of this and future generations – as well as the potential healthcare costs - far outweigh the alleged economic impact of closing these plants.

When the public utilities – and their shareholders – finally determine that coal technology is unprofitable, they will not hesitate for a moment to close these plants. Why must the rate-payer be forced to support their dying industry?

A rate-increase to lock customers into buying power from coal plants is nothing more than an industry's attempt to squelch the development of alternative sources of power.

As a ratepayer for electrical energy provided by FirstEnergy I strongly recommend that the PUCO deny FirstEnergy their request to raise consumer rates to pay for their lack of planning and financial responsibility in keeping their power plants in top operating condition.

Furthermore, their lack of concern for the air pollution that these power plants generate tells me that FirstEnergy is only focusing on the bottom line of their profit margin and seemingly cares less about the health of the people of Ohio. It is the PUCO that has the responsibility to keep the electrical energy generating companies in compliance with the air quality standards set by law. The citizens of Ohio expect and demand that you do your job.

If FirstEnergy had enough money to spend millions of dollars on the naming rights to a football stadium then they should be able to come up with the money to update their own equipment. And if they can not do this then PUCO should conduct an investigation as to why they can not find the money.

PUCO -

Please deny the rate increase to last consumer rate began prior from Ohio's old, largest coal plants.
A budget of ad, public utility, only benefit the utility shareholders and delays investment in efficiency and renewable energy.

My family and I can not suddenly force public and say my or our electric bill.

Sincerely,

To the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio:

I am writing to oppose the proposed rate increase in order to help energy companies continue to use inefficient and outdated coal plants to generate energy.
(Case number 14-1297-EL-SSO)

Bailing out this old, polluting technology harms consumers in multiple ways: it costs more; it increases toxic emissions from coal plants; and it delays the shift to cleaner energy sources.

Ohio has some of the worst air quality in the nation. This is shameful. Please don't let energy companies continue to degrade the air we all have to breath.
