To Ohio Power Siting Board Members:

I am writing to oppose Duke Energy company's proposed Central Corridor Pipeline Extension Project. Each one of the three proposed routes under consideration for this project is inappropriate for the residential areas they will affect due to the scale of the pipeline and the dangers inherent to it. This is not a service pipeline providing energy to local communities. It is a large scale, dangerous transmission pipeline more appropriate to be sited in industrial areas or along interstate corridors.

All three routes site the pipeline directly through densely populated areas affecting not only private residences, but schools, places of worship, day cares and nursing homes, and local businesses as well. Not only are the unpredictable dangers of this project extremely inappropriate for the number of residential neighborhoods it affects but the construction of the pipeline would cause significant and irreversible environmental damage.

I am asking the Siting Board to require Duke Energy Company to reroute this dangerous project to industrial or rural routes less dangerous to the local communities and more appropriate for a transmission pipeline of this scale.

Thank you for your consideration.
