Subject: Central Corridor Pipeline Extension--Case # 16-0253-GA-BTX

To Whom it May Concern,

The Duke Energy Proposal to run a 30" high pressure transmission line through much of Suburban Cincinnati is unconscionable and shows a disregard for the welfare of families, schools and businesses along the proposed routes. Officials withing the siting board, local and state politicians surely are aware that this will bring harm to the people they are called to serve. From environmental damage to neighborhoods, loss of property values and the risk of catastrophic accidents, I hope that all involved in the process recognize that these transmission lines have no place running through neighborhoods within Greater Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky. I am adamantly opposed to the Central Corridor as proposed.

30" gas transmission lines under up to 720 psi need to be routed through rural areas, why is it necessary to point this out to officials involved in this project. Migrating from oil to natural gas is beneficial to all of us for environmental reasons, it just has to be done the right way.

I respectfully ask that Ohio Politicians, members of the Ohio Power Siting board come to their senses, act in the best interest of their constituents and do the right thing.

Respectfully,

David McDiarmid
