To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing in support of the Central Corridor Pipeline.

Natural gas is an essential fuel for heating, industrial process, and power generation.

It is abundant, clean, and domestically obtained. Those fighting natural gas infrastructure are harming economic development and unnecessarily limiting supply, thus raising prices.

It might not affect the loud, wealthy people campaigning against the project, but many less fortunate in our society depend on inexpensive natural gas.

Thankfully, through the ingenuity and hard work of engineers and others in the industry, supply has been maximized in recent years which has made natural gas affordable for millions of Americans.

I support building this infrastructure, so that our community can enjoy the benefits that inexpensive energy provides.

Thank you for your efforts.
