To Whom This May Concern:

Without going into those matters that others are more eloquent about, I'll be brief. This "Incubation" project reminds me of the story of the camel sticking its nose under the tent flap. The Windbreaker is the camel. Once he's got his nose inside, the rest of the camel will follow, and it will become crowded in your tent, in a hurry.

You cannot be serious about letting this happen in the Great Lakes.
