COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

Concerning the Duke pipeline, I live directly on the green route. My home will be 18 feet from the pipeline according to the application. The OPSB requires that the utility company notify residents in writing within 7 days of the public hearing. The hearing is less than 48 hours away and no residences in my community have received a letter. I checked on the document site and I can see that Duke claims an "inadvertent" error prevented them from sending out the letter and they want YOU to let it slide. At what point are we going to actually follow the rules here? What are the rules for if they don't have to be followed? Also what does it say about the competence of a company when they can't even get it together enough to send out required letters for one of the biggest and most expensive projects they have ever attempted? You want them to build a pipeline thru our community and self-regulate it? Is an "inadvertent error" what they will call it when it blows up and kills everyone? Wow
