Jeb Bush: Trump may drag down GOP

MIAMI - Former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush warns that Republicans are in for a beating in the fall elections if congressional races focus on the rhetoric and character of President Donald Trump.

Bush, an early front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination who tangled with Trump during the 2016 campaign, praised his moves to roll back business regulations and sign into law a $1.5 trillion tax overhaul that slashes corporate rates.

But Bush lambasted Trump's erratic leadership style, obsession with Twitter and "racist" comments that could cost Republicans control of Congress in November if they can't distance themselves from the former reality TV star.

"If the election is nationalized and it's not about the economy, then we'll lose," Bush told USA TODAY as Trump prepares to deliver the State of the Union address rounding up his first year in office. "If it's about the economy and it's driven by state or district interest, incumbents can do well."

Bush assessed the Republican Party and its president during a wide-ranging interview after touring a charter ele-

Since dropping out of the presidential race, Bush has focused on his investment firm, Dock Square Capital, and his work with the Foundation for Excellence in Education, which advocates for school choice and charter schools. To prevent a Democratic wave this fall, as many polls predict, Bush said GOP candidates need to sell every example of companies giving out bonuses, increasing salaries and creating jobs. "Every business that announces a job increase, you can make a pretty compelling case that it's tax reform and regulatory reform that was a catalyst to make that happen," Bush said.

But Bush said he worries that Trump will not allow Republicans to steer clear of him because of "his incredible view that the world revolves around him."

"The character of the guy and the (turnover) and fighting and just the constant chaos around his presidency that is self-inflicted has made it hard for him," he said. "I want the president to succeed. I don't think he will succeed if he continues on this path."

Some of Bogard's favorites that will be passed out Saturday are milkweed, mountain mint and cone flowers. Even though the seeds will be handed out this weekend, it's not recommended they are planted until later in the spring.

'When it's done freezing and frosting is a good time," Bogard said.

One of the easiest ways to plant the native seeds is to toss them on the

"If you put just a small layer of topsoil down, it will help eliminate some predation so that birds don't pick at them," Bogard said. "Some people cover them with straw, too."

Many of the seeds to be handed out Saturday at Gallant Farm on Buttermilk Hill Road in Delaware will grow into vegetable plants, according to Gabe Ross, the farm's manager. As with the Crestline event, Ross said seeds will be provided, but guests are welcome to bring their own as well.

"We do heirloom vegetables, and there will be wildflower seeds from the prairie," Ross said. "A lot of them are varieties that used to be common but went by the wayside and now they're coming back — a lot of people think they're a little more flavorful than the hybrids."

Ross said he's noticed an uptick in the number of people who grow gardens each year, and seed-swap events help people learn more about varieties that were once very popular. He said it helps preserve vegetables that are no longer carried by seed catalogs.

Residents of Marion and surrounding counties are welcome to the event, Ross

James' house in the 300 block of North State Street. Grogan said that police had often been called to the house for Marvin, the victim in the case, who struggled with substance abuse.

Grogan said that the investigation found that Marvin had been drinking when he went to his older brother's house that Saturday night. An argument broke out between the brothers, at which point Grogan alleged that Marvin tried to hit or tackle James, who has a prosthetic leg.

It was then that James used the knife on his younger brother, stabbing him in the neck once, the county prosecutor said.

First responders found Marvin bleeding from the neck a few doors down from James' house and took him to OhioHealth Marion General Hospital, where he died of his injuries, according to Marion police.

"This was truly a complete accident," Burchinal told the judge Friday, saying that James did not intend to hurt his brother and that the type of wound Marvin suffered rarely was fatal. Several members of Brown's family were in the courtroom Friday in support of the 54-year-old, with five of them asking the court for leniency for Brown, whom his sister Mary Brown described as "mild-mannered" and "quiet." "This has been a horrific, horrific thing in my life.

I love both my brothers, and they loved each other," she said. "I just ask the court to have some mercy on my brother, and I ask God to have mercy on him," she said

David Brown, Marvin's and James' brother, told the judge about James' military service, his work ethic and his love for his children and his country.

One of James' children was in the courtroom and told the judge that not many 30-year-olds could say they had a father who was always there for them.

"I've always had my dad," daughter Cametra Brown said.

James Brown wiped his eyes with a tissue as his family members spoke. When it was his turn to talk, Brown said he loved Marvin, that he still could not believe what happened and that it felt like a dream he could not wake up from.

"That is the last thing I would've ever thought would've happened," he said.

As he was led out of the courthouse, his family members shouted words of love and encourage-

Mary, his and Marvin's sister, said the Browns will continue to support James and heal from Marvin's death.

Marvin left behind a daughter and eight living brothers and sister, including James, according to his obituary.

James Brown will be eligible for judicial release after 180 days in prison, Grogan said, meaning he could ask Finnegan to allow him to be released early.

icy Center, a joint venture of the Urban Institute and the Brookings Institution, in addition to the anticipated $1.5 trillion in federal red ink from the new GOP tax law. Amid the furious negotiations over the spending bill, GOP leaders used the tax cuts as "sweeteners" to attract the support of balking Republican conservatives in the House..

"It was just for the sake of buying time," said Thomas Cooke, a professor of business law and tax expert at Georgetown University.

The taxes also are opposed by plenty of Democrats. That's in contrast to many of the tax levies. credits and deductions in the comprehensive tax legislation, which starkly split Republicans and Democrats in a bitter battle last year.

But despite the bipartisan support for repealing the health care taxes, the delays embedded in the spending bill might have a short shelf life, Cooke said. With Feb. 8 looming as the next deadline for Congress to reach agreement on immigration and long-term government funding to avert another showdown, he said, "everything is still on the table, subject to negotiation. ... I see (the tax delays) almost getting cratic states — like Medtronic in Minnesota and GE Healthcare, Baxter International and Abbott Laboratories in Illinois. Some Republican lawmakers, meanwhile, have sounded the alarm on tens of thousands of jobs in the industry flying out of the U.S. because of the tax — a claim based largely on industry-funded studies.

The 2.3 percent tax on makers of medical devices applies to equipment such as surgical instruments, X-ray equipment, MRI machines and cardiac pacemakers.

Powerful industry lobhave agitated bies against the health care levies. They aimed early last year for their repeal in the Republican bill to replace the Obama health care law — a stunning failure for the GOP — and then pushed for it, unsuccessfully, in the tax legislation.

An array of big insurers, including United-Health, Aetna and Blue Cross-Blue Shield, have lined up against the health insurance tax. which is based on a company's market share. Some analysts have warned that the companies could try to soften their tax blow by raising the cost of premiums for consumers.

Congress has repeatedly delayed or suspended the taxes' effective dates in recent years. Now, with the government spending bill, the medical devices tax - on hold since 2016 and previously scheduled to land this past Jan. 1 - is delayed two years to 2020. The tax on health insurance providers, also on hold for two years but in effect Jan. 1, gets a oneyear suspension for 2019. The tax on so-called Cadillac health plans, a 40 percent levy on employers that offer the generous plans, is deferred from 2020 to 2022.

Hospital fire kills more than 30 people in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - A fire swept through a hospital for the elderly in southeastern South Korea on Friday, killing more than 30 people and injuring dozens in one of the country's deadliest fires in recent years.

The fire at Sejong Hospital in the city of Miryang killed 31 people and injured 81, 14 of them in critical condition, the state-run National Fire Agency said. Agency officials said the death toll could

Details of the fire including its cause were unknown. But local Miryang fire officials said they put out the blaze at 10:26 a.m., nearly three hours after it started at the first-floor emergency room of the hospital.

A National Fire Agency official said many of the deaths were confirmed after the victims were taken to nearby hospitals while being put on artificial ventilators. But he said he has no further details including the identification of the dead. The official spoke on condition of anonymity saying he wasn't authorized to speak to media.

A total of 194 people had been hospitalized in two buildings of Sejong Hospital, including 94 elderly people who were hospitalized in the nursing hospital, before the fire broke out, Miryang fire official Choi Choi Man-wu said in an earlier televised briefing.

Sejong Hospital has a nursing hospital for the elderly and also offers regular medical services.

The hospital has 193 beds including 98 beds for the elderly who needs nursing care with 35 medical staff, according to Yonhap news agency.

South Korea is one of the fastest-aging countries in the world and has many nursing hospitals, which are preferred for elderly people who need long-term

President Moon Jae-in convened an emergency meeting with senior advisers and expressed regret over the blaze. He ordered officials to provide necessary medical supports to those rescued, find the exact cause of the fire and work out measures to prevent future fires, according to his spokesman Park Su-hyun.

Several recent fires in South Korea have been deadly.

In late December, 29 people were killed in a building fire in central Seoul, which was the country's deadliest blaze over the past decade before the hospital fire. Last weekend, a fire at a Seoul motel killed six people, and police arrested a man who allegedly set it ablaze in anger because he had been denied a room for being heavily drunk.

In 2014, a fire set by an 81-year-old dementia patient killed 21 at another hospital for the elderly.

In other business, the board approved several substitute teachers for the school year, with Melvin Allen, board vice president, saying he is pleased to see several new substitutes in the district after approving pay increases at the December meeting $100 per day for substitutes with a valid license, and $110 for former Harrison Hills teachers or teachers with a valid license to teach in a pre-K to 12th-grade assignment area.

Classified substitutes — which include food servers, custodians and secretaries now receive $8.65 an hour, while substitute bus drivers receive $12.65 an hour.

"I'm glad to see when we raised the sub pay, it might have brought some new subs out of the woodwork," Allen said.

The board also approved the purchase of two 77-passenger buses at $83,772 each, as well as a handicapped-accessible bus for $89,918.

The board went into executive session to discuss personnel matters. Members took no action upon returning to open session.

The next meeting of the Harrison Hills City School District Board of Education will be at 6 p.m. Feb. 22 at the administration building on Peppard Avenue in Cadiz.

Assistant Prosecutor Joseph Vavra gave his opening statement Thursday, outlining the meetings between Curtis and Ashley Padgett, a confidential informant.

'These investigations, drug trafficking charges, more commonly than not start with what's known as a confidential informant. Confidential informants are usually individuals who find themselves on the wrong side of the law," Vavra said. "Confidential informants are offered the chance to help themselves and their case by assisting the state in pursuing other individuals."

In Padgett's case, Vavra said she was being investigated for writing drug prescriptions on Curtis's prescription pads. She met with investigators from the Ohio Pharmacy Board who were looking into the

"During that process, she was offered the opportunity to become a confidential informant and to help her situation," Vavra said. "She had previously worked with Dr. Curtis. They had also previously been in a relationship together. Her task ... was to contact Dr. Curtis and provide him with the opportunity to engage in illegal activity."

Vavra said the operation was carried out by officers with the Belmont County Major Crimes Unit, who equipped Padgett with recording devices. An exchange took place April 26 at Curtis's house, located at 135 E. Lawn St., St. Clairsville, Vavra said.

There is an exchange of pills and money. Dr. Curtis turns pills over to her, she hands money over to Dr. Curtis,' Vavra said, adding that Padgett was searched before and after each contact with Curtis and the pills were sent away for test-

Vavra said a recorded call took place the next day, during which the sale of drugs was discussed. Padgett then traveled to Curtis's office to speak with him, then to his home where she received other pills.

Vavra said based on those two instances, the Major Crimes Unit applied for a warrant and executed a search of Curtis's home, where they found eight Adderall pills and half a Suboxone pill. He added that the prosecution fully expects to have Padgett's credibility called into question but said there is evidence and recordings to support the case.

You don't just have to rely on the testimony of Ashley Padgett," he told the jury. 'You will see and hear the discussions to complete these transactions, money for drugs. ... Pay attention to that, your eyes, your ears, what is on these recordings.

Aaron Miller, Curtis's defense attorney, countered Vavra's claims in his opening statement, questioning the motives of law enforcement and suggesting the forfeiture of Curtis's office building and/or home was the goal. He gave background information on the romantic relationship between Curtis and Padgett, beginning when they met at an area hospital where she was a surgical technician.

"They enter into a romantic relationship and eventually Dr. Curtis has her work as his medical assistant at his office here in St. Clairsville," Miller said, adding that the relationship continued for about three years until Padgett's husband discovered his wife infidelity. "As of December of 2015, the relationship between Dr. Curtis and Ashley Padgett ends. They have very little or no contact until March 1 of Miller said Padgett claims Curtis got her addicted to Adderall, but she attempted to gain different drugs.

"She either stole, or someone else stole, prescription pads from his office, and she writes at least 20 prescriptions," Miller said, adding that Padgett wrote the pre-scriptions for Percocet. "When she gets found out for writing the prescriptions ...

Miller referred to Padgett's interview by the Ohio Pharmacy Board and the Major Crimes Unit.

You go into his office and you see if he'll give you prescription pads. You see if you can get Adderall from him. You see if you can get Percocets from him, Miller said, describing the directions he claimed Padgett was given. "A year has gone by, she's been out of Dr. Curtis's life. ... It's law enforcement that has brought her into his life. ... Was Dr. Curtis predisposed to commit any crime at the time these events occurred, or was it law enforcement that placed into the mind of an innocent person at that time the disposition to commit the crime? That's a very important issue." He added that the total amount of money involved in these transactions was a little more than $96. "They want his house. They want a doctor's house for $96," Miller said. "This whole setup began, was carried out and was fulfilled through law enforcement, and it would not have happened otherwise."

The prosecution called Major Crimes Unit Investigator Ed Starkey, who described the process of collecting evidence and working with confidential informants and of setting up the meetings. The jury then saw video recordings of those interactions.

Get your Wonka on at That Chocolate Bar in Canton

That Christmas Bar has a fanciful sequel at TD's Tailgate

By Dan Kane GateHouse Ohio Media

CANTON That Christmas Bar was a holiday - season smash, jam - packed with revelers night after night.

Located inside TD's Tailgate, this innovative pop-up bar at 2234 Tuscarawas St. W offered a sensory overload of gaudy Christmas decorations and lights, festive Christmas music, sugary Christmas-themed cocktails and such offbeat elements as a snow machine and an Elfie Selfie photo station.

"We hoped we'd have a great response, then it opened and the crowds began to build. On the weekends, we'd open the door at 4 p.m. and by 4:07 it would be completely full," said Scott Shapiro, who masterminded the pop-up bar with his wife (and TD's co-owner), Kim. "Kim called me up the second week we were open and said, 'You're not going to believe this but there's THREE party buses sitting in the parking lot."

"It far surpassed any of our expectations,"
Kim said. "People really reacted to it, and I think they appreciated the effort that went into it. It was like going to a Christmas party where you didn't have to do any of the work."

After the overwhelming success of That Christmas Bar, which was open from Black Friday through Dec. 30, it's no surprise that there's a sequel. That Chocolate Bar, whose fanciful decor was inspired by the 1971 movie favorite "Willie Wonka & the Chocolate Factory," opened Tuesday and will welcome revelers and chocoholics through March 3. Hours are 4 to 11 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and 4 p.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday.

Asked about the bar's theme, Scott said, "We wanted something involving chocolate because of the time frame of this rolling over Valentine's Day. The Wonka idea came about from brainstorming with family and friends about what should be next."

"We needed a way to make chocolate fun," Kim said.

For That Christmas Bar,

the Shapiros scoured flea markets and junk stores to find as many Christmas decorations as they could to load up the walls. That Chocolate Bar "was significantly more challenging," Scott said.

"We've had to make everything from scratch. I had to put on the hat of a set designer doing a play," said Kim. "Our idea was, 'What if somewhere in the basement of that (Wonka) Visitors to That Christmas Bar will find Oompa Loompa statues scattered about, a fountain filled with faux-chocolate, scratch-and-sniff wallpaper, lollipop-topped tables, light-up gummi bears, and a Fizzy Lifting Room photo station with a bubble machine and bubble lights.

Signs referencing the Wonka movie are scattered around the barroom, including one reading:
Candy is dandy but liquor is quicker. "That's sort of our mantra," Kim said.
Bartenders will have candythemed apparel, although Beverage-wise, That Chocolate Bar has martinis in double chocolate. chocolate covered cherry, peanut butter chocolate and cotton candy, each for $9. Other cocktails, also $9, are themed around "Wonka" movie characters. The Violet Beauregard is made from blueberry vodka and blueberry juice; the Augustus Gloop blends Jagermeister, Amaretto, cherry brandy, coke and bitters; and the oh-so-sweet Veruka Salt mixes coconut rum, hazelnut liqueur and butterscotch schnapps. There are chocolate beers on tap ($6), and wines at $7.50 a glass.

The food menu is very limited — a couple of appetizers from TD's and deluxe snack mixes. The weir dest-sounding thing about the Wonka edible offerings is a concoction called Flavor Trippin' ($8).

Scott explains: "You take an Mberry tablet, which supresses your sour and bitter tastebuds for 15 to 20 minutes, then we give you a platter of things your brain knows aren't sweet — slices of lemon, lime, grapefruit — and they will taste very sweet. The tablet is all natural. It's just funny."

According to the ordinance, the parking of any RV shall be 15 feet from the street right of way of lot, and not less than 30 feet from another RV located on the premises, or other structures; there will be only one way to enter and one way to exit the facility; RVs must be 10 years or newer; each RV space will be kept clean and not overrun with vehicles and trash, and will abide by the village's property maintenance ordinance; dumpsters will be provided by the RV park owners, with weekly pick-ups; have one awning or pop-out canopy no larger than 13 feet; open fire pits with screens, or fire rings are permitted, but must be attended.

Violations or failure to comply with any of the provisions of the ordinance shall be fined $100 and each month that such violation continues shall constitute a separate violation, all of which shall be brought before council.

The charge for a three-quarter inch water tap shall be $400, plus the cost of the meter and pit. Any tap in excess of three-quarters of an inch shall be $700, plus the cost of the meter and pit. The charge for a sewer tap shall be $500, paid prior to installation. If one tap for water and sewer is feasible for the RV park, they will be charged each month for the number of units on the property. For example, if 10 for 10 units. The units will be counted and charged as individual dwellings for water and sewer each month. A $20 charge will be assessed each month for all vacant lots

This was the second reading of the proposed ordinance.

President Koch noted the ordinance does not apply to any existing RV parks in the village, or to any presently under construction. Instead, it establishes guidelines for any RV parks that may be built in the future.

Councilwoman Donna Dixon questioned the requirement that all RVs in any park must be no older than 10 years.

Mayor Travis said the requirement is similar to an existing village ordinance concerning house trailers. "I think the cost of the water is kind of steep," Councilwoman Slowter commented. "Very steep." Stockport resident Chet Cunningham questioned a number of points in Ordinance 17-5, among them the size of the awnings and the age of the RV. He asked if the village is trying to discourage anyone else from creating a RV park in the future.

"No," Mayor Travis replied. "We are only trying to make sure if somebody does create a park, they take care of it and maintain it."

"Then I think some of the stipulations in this RVs are on the property, they will be charged ordinance should be more friendly toward potential business owners," Cunningham said.

Councilwoman Lynne Myers made a motion to pass the second reading of the ordinance. Councilman Cunningham seconded. Council voted to approve, Councilwoman Slowter, who voted no.

During the December 20 council meeting, Mayor Travis announced that the village's existing ordinance, Ordinance 16-2, requires the village to bill for water and sewer for each unit on a multiunit property, such as a trailer court, apartment complex or RV park. The mayor said she spoke with a lawyer, in Columbus, who advised her that the village needs to be billing for each unit.

Mayor Travis stated, at that meeting, that properties with multiple units on them will be charged for each individual unit after the first of the year, per the existing ordinance.

Council had a lengthy discussion with a number of village residents about Ordinance 16-2. Several residents felt it was unfair of the village to charge property owners for multiple water meters.

Slowter said the village was aware, years ago, that it had the option to bill for multiple units but chose not to, then.

Village Solicitor Janna Woodburn repeated the mayor's statement that the village's existing ordinance, Ordinance 16-2, which requires Council will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. the village to bill for water and sewer for each 21, at the Harkins Community Center.

unit on a multiunit property, has been on the books for a number of years already, but has never been enforced. Woodburn said the reason for the ordinance, as with all ordinances concerning utilities, is to allow the village to cover its operating costs. She added that part of her job is to make sure the village is in compliance with existing ordinances, especially those pertaining to the operation of the village.

Fiscal Officer Traci Baker reported she had received a request from Century Link to bore under the street on Cleveland Avenue for a telephone line. Baker noted the line, in place now, hangs above the road. She added that work will be completed within 120 days of receiving authorization from the village.

President Koch commented that Century Link is usually pretty reliable when it comes to cleaning up any messes they make on job sites.

Councilman Roger McBride made the motion to allow Century Link to bore under the street for the new telephone line. Koch seconded. Council approved.

Finally, council approved the minutes of the previous council meeting and the payment listing for the village.

Musical talent flows at MVHS

By ALLISON GLASS News Staff Reporter

MOUNT VERNON — Music took center stage Wednesday night at Mount Vernon High School, where dedicated young musicians presented their selections at a recital ahead of the annual Ohio Music Education Association District 10 Solo & Ensemble Contest.

This recital showcased the chamber music that individuals and small groups will be presenting on Feb. 3 at the contest at Mansfield High School. This adjudicated event scores each participating individual or ensemble on a number scale from one to five, with a score of one being exemplary.

Musical selections were showcased by choir, band and orchestra members.

"I am really pleased with all of the work my students are putting into this," Bell told the News. "It's always fun to see them take ownership of what they learn in class and apply it on their own. A group actually brought me to tears today, because they finally got it."

Band directors Andrew Sundman and Megan Aubihl, showcased the talents of both the Concert and Symphonic bands. Sundman explained that these students have been practicing this music for weeks and this recital gives them the opportunity to hear feedback and make adjustments ahead of the adjudicat-

The orchestra selections, under the direction of Anthony Springer and Amy Miller, highlighted the student's work from Concert orchestra. Springer stated that some of his students have been practicing their chamber selections every day since Novem-

"They are all preparing well," said Springer, "The repetition helps, for many it's the first time they are playing alone or preparing with an accompanist. It's great to see them building their confidence."

Just under 50 musical selections were presented at Wednesday's recital from composers that included Bach, Vivaldi, Beethoven, Debussy and Mozart.

The bands presented a selection of trios, quartets and sextets; which were presented for mallet, brass, trumpet, flute and saxophone, as well as one tuba solo selection.

The orchestras presented chamber ensembles, duets and many solo pieces for violin, viola and cello.

The choirs presented female, mixed vocal and male ensembles. There was one vocal solo presented, which was performed by Mark Mahan.

A trumpet trio consisting of Junior Averey Bell, Senior Rachel Duvall and Junior Mia Craigo presented a trio of trumpet sketches for the audience. Of their performance, Bell said, "It went really well, there are definitely things to work on, but it went well for us." Duvall added, "We've been practicing for a long time, but finally we've been putting it all together and it went very well." Craigo explained, "This will be our third and fourth years going to contest and we look forward to it every year."

The district OMEA Solo & Ensemble Contest is Feb. 3 in Mansfield. Attendance is free and open to the public.

Legendary skiing filmmaker Warren Miller dies at age 93

SEATTLE (AP) — Warren Miller, the legendary outdoor filmmaker who for decades made homages to downhill skiing that he narrated with his own humorous style, has died. He was 93.

His family said in a statement that Miller died of natural causes Wednesday evening at his home on Orcas Island in Washington state.

A World War II veteran, ski racer, surfer and sailor, Miller produced more than 500 action films about a variety of outdoor activities including surfing and sailing. But he was best known for his thrill-seeking films featuring daredevil skiers barreling down breathtakingly steep slopes.

His annual ski movies served as informal kickoffs to ski season and became a rite of passage for the legions of ski bums and snowboarders who flocked to see them at movie theaters and played them on video while relaxing with drinks after tough ski

"Warren's legacy of adventure, freedom and humor carries on in the countless lives he touched," his wife of 30 years, Laurie Miller, said in a statement Thursday. "Warren loved nothing more than sharing his life's adventures and hearing literally every day from friends old and new about how his stories inspired others to enrich and enjoy their own lives."

Miller was born in the Hollywood area of Los Angeles, California, in 1924. He grew up during the Depression and said his family struggled to put food on the table.

Survey: Being a female artist in pop is a 'lonely' field

NEW YORK (AP) — A new survey of top pop charts over the past six years finds that men overwhelmingly dominate the ranks of artists and songwriters and that only 2 percent of producers in music are female.

The University of Southern California study shows women comprised just 22.4 percent of artists and 12.3 percent of songwriters on the Billboard Hot 100, a singles chart that crosses musical genres.

Rihanna, Nicki Minaj and Taylor Swift dominated the charts during this period but the survey found that relatively fewer other women in the music industry are employed behind those superstars.

Mila Kunis feted with parade before Harvard roast

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Mila Kunis has been paraded through Harvard Square by college students dressed in drag.

The "That '70s Show" actress is being honored Thursday as Woman of the Year by Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Theatricals.

The nation's oldest collegiate theatrical organization will be roasting the Ukraineborn actress later at its historic theater and bestowing on her a coveted pudding pot.

Kunis rode down Massachusetts Avenue in the back of a Bentley convertible flanked by students in outlandish wigs and dresses and a brass band.

A handful of protesters also held signs calling out the troupe for not allowing female performers.

Hasty Pudding calls Kunis one of Hollywood's "most sought after, vivacious, and engaging actresses.' Kunis earned a Golden Globe nomination for her role in 2010's "Black Swan."

The researchers also looked at Grammy Award nominees. A total of 899 people were nominated for Grammys between 2013 and 2018. Of those, 90.7 percent were male and 9.3 percent were female.

"For women, pursuing music as an artist is largely a solo activity, and appears to be a lonely one," the researchers wrote. They noted that the numbers were "surprising" because women are big customers of music, making up 53 percent of digital music buyers in 2014.

The university's Annenberg Inclusion Initiative researchers examined 600 songs appearing on the Billboard Hot 100 endof-year charts from 2012 through 2017. A total of 1,239 solo performers, duos and bands were included.

Some of the more eye-popping numbers include that only two women of color were among the ranks of the 651 producers listed in the charts while nine male songwriters were responsible for one-fifth of the songs in the sample.

"What's really problematic about this is that those many men and their views of the world are setting an agenda for pop culture," Dr. Stacy L.

Smith, founder and director of the Inclusion Initiative, said in an interview Thursday. She called the handful of powerful men in music "gatekeepers" who may not reflect the "dynamic world in which we

The Inclusion Initiative has also previously examined gender disparity in films and found that a bias in favor of men seems to be the reason female directors aren't tapped to helm major motion pictures.

2 lawmakers apologize for remarks

By JULIE CARR SMYTH AP Statehouse

Correspondent COLUMBUS (AP) — Two Republican state lawmakers apologized on Friday for offensive remarks they made during a top House staffer's going-away party that made light of recent sexual misconduct scandals and disparaged female lawmakers.

State Rep. Bill Seitz, of Cincinnati, and state Sen. Matt Huffman, of Lima, separately expressed regret for vulgar and derogatory jokes cracked on Tuesday at the farewell celebration for House Chief of Staff Mike Dittoe. Their remarks came less than a week after the House completed newly mandated sexual harassment training.

Seitz, a veteran lawmaker known for his oratory, issued an open letter overnight Thursday to House Speaker Clifford Rosenberger and fellow House members saying he regretted any shame, distress or embarrassment he caused with his comments. Among other things, he maligned GOP state Rep. Candice Keller and former state Rep. Diana Fessler with name-calling and suggestive and sexist jokes.

'My words were irresponsible as a member of this esteemed institution and as a member of House leadership," wrote Seitz, the House majority leader.

Huffman apologized for remarks including a vulgar term for female genitalia.

"I understand why people at the event were offended, and I apologize," Huffman said in a statement released through Senate leadership on Friday. "I am truly sorry."

The event, styled as a roast and offering an open bar, was held at the posh Athletic Club in downtown Columbus. About 100 legislators, lobbyists and staff members attended. Keller was not there, but at least one other female House member walked out because the proceedings got so vulgar. Seitz fell afterward and broke his ankle.

Keller said she was shocked and disappointed when she heard about Seitz's comments, which included saying she wears a "tinfoil hat."

"It's very hurtful and very embarrassing. I can't explain why," she said. "It's humiliating for some reason, and I didn't really do anything. I find it odd, really, in light of the Harvey Weinstein culture in which we live, that everyone isn't more cautious."

Weinstein, a Hollywood movie producer, has been accused of sexually harassing several women. He has apologized for causing "a lot of pain" with "the way I've behaved."

Keller said she wishes that Rosenberger, present at the event, had done more to stop it in the moment.

"I can't for the life of me figure out in what universe this is funny," she said, adding she came to Columbus to get things done for her constituents on jobs, tax reform and fighting the opioid crisis.

Forward motion of 'Maze Runner' stalls in 3rd entry

Moviegoers who come late to the "Maze Runner" franchise, which now numbers three, will doubtless have one very reasonable question: Where, pray tell, are all the mazes I was promised?

Alas, the maze of "Maze Runner" referred to as "the Glade" by the few dozen teenagers who were mysteriously dropped into it - has been in the rearview since the first 2014 installment, a modestly budgeted YA adaption and a bit of a "Hunger Games" knockoff. But what the two sequels, first "Maze Runner: Scorch Trials" and now "Maze Runner: The Death Cure," have lacked in labyrinths, they have made up for in run-

Literal running but also a genuinely kinetic forward movement. The "Maze Runner" films, which have all been directed by former visual effects supervisor Wes Ball, move better than the average dystopia. So many fantasies bog themselves down with backstory and world-explaining, but the chief pleasure of the "Maze Runner" films is that the characters are perpetually grasping their predicament right along with the audience.

And like the previous chapters, "Maze Runner: The Death Cure" picks up right in medias res. Thomas (Dylan O'Brien) and his close-knit crew of escapees-turned-rebel fighters (Thomas Brodie-Sangster, Rosa Salazar, Barry Pepper) speed after a train on a desolate plain, hop aboard, and when security guards for the nefarious organization called WCKD (short for World in Catastrophe: Killzone Experiment Department, and pronounced "wicked") start swarming, they outwit them, and, somehow, fly away with a train car full of kids.

They are among the few left on Earth immune to a virus that turns all into zombies. In "Maze Runner," they escaped the enormous concrete maze they were plopped into with their memories erased. By "Scorch Trials," they realized the institution that sheltered them (WCKD, under the command of an icy scientist played by Patricia Clarkson and a severe commander played by Aidan Gillen) wasn't to be trusted. They broke out and joined with a band of resistance fighters. In "The Death Cure," they try to free the remaining lab rats, including their pal Minho (Ki Hong Lee), who are housed in the last remaining city, a walled-in cluster of skyscrapers.

The "Maze Runner" trilogy has essentially skipped from high school (the Glade) to college (WCKD) and finally into the urban workplace. Just one with, you know, zombies and poor health care options. But these are very sincere movies about the fellowship of friends trying to survive together and figure out just who they can trust. There is a drinking game's worth of moments where a character vows not leave their buddy behind.

'The Death Cure" is the biggest budgeted, most bloated and longest running entry for the franchise. It maintains the movies' quick pace before stalling in an overlong finale. It should be a mutually understood condition that if you're going to name your movie "Maze Runner: The Death Cure," you've got to turn in a cut under two hours.

Think too much about the plot and it will surely spoil the fun of "The Death Cure." WCKD may be an imperfect organization, but then again, the fate of the human race hangs in the balance. WCKD's chief motivation is to study the blood of the immune so that an antidote can be discovered. Literally millions of lives would be saved if only a millennial

But if the "Maze Runner" films have chronicled major stages of young adulthood, they have graduated a few along the way. O'Brien has shouldered the films well, even as much of their enjoyment derives from the scattered ensemble of characters actors (Giancarlo Esposito, Will Poulter, Walton Goggins). But Ball's command of the camera and his ability to hurtle his character through science-fiction realms has visibly grown through the three movies. For too long "The Death Cure" stays in one place; it's best when on the move. And now, it's probably time for Ball to move on, too.

Or seminary.

In fact, that's rarely how God works, even less so for bricks and mortar. So I worry about seminaries and how we look at seminary education and how we as churches do ministerial formation. I want my own denomination to refocus on formation, spiritual and professional, but my time and energy keeps getting taken up with institutional survival and structural salvage.

But that's why I am oddly so inspired by what Trinity Episcopal Church is doing in the heart of Newark. Their building, they came to realize, could not be saved: but the church could be. And it's through the church that God saves peo ple, not through buildings (or institutions). Images of Christ are nice, meeting Jesus in the life of faith is central.

Our road was impassable for a week, so we had to dump hundreds of gallons of milk down the drain until the semis could get through. We were very lucky in that we never lost power and, of course, had plenty of milk to drink!

Lastly, the road conditions for weeks after still stick out in my mind. The roads were covered in two inches of very rough ice, and you drove through a tunnel of snow eight-feet tall. It was spring before all the snow disappeared!

Sheriff John Borgia said the body was found by a neighbor and reported at 12:55 p.m. It was found just west of Dogtown Road near Bellevue Reservoir No. 5.

National Guard bulldozers were trying to reach the area this afternoon, Borgia said.

Thousands of area homes were without heat Thursday night as Ohio's worst blizzard ever shrieked into its second day.

Winds gusting up to 60 mph cut visibility to almost zero and stopped all but a few rescue operations. The winds had subsided by this morning and snow stopped after about nine inches had fallen. National Guardsmen and authorities stationed at the Huron County Sheriff's Department said the toll of injuries and more possible deaths cannot be counted until the blizzard ends and rural areas can be reached. About 90 calls for help came to the sheriff's department from pregnant women, crippled elderly persons, needing immediate medical attention. Most of the calls were in vain. The fury of the storm squelched all but one Guard rescue effort. The blizzard stopped even bulldozers and vie-ton Army trucks.

stranded motorists, families with infants and persons

Hundreds of Huron County residents in homes without electricity huddled with neighbors for the most elemental of purposes: Survival. A family on River Road north of Milan reported it was breaking up furniture to burn in a washtub to keep warm.

The one Guard rescue required about 12 hours to cover five miles. Residents and stranded motorists in 14 homes along Ohio 547 and Town Line 32 southwest of Monroeville, had been without heat since 5 p.m. Thursday. A bulldozer left the Guard Armory Thursday afternoon and slugged its way into Monroeville, where it was followed by volunteers driving four-wheel drive vehicles.

At 7 p.m. as the bulldozer approached Farr Road, a gust of wind snapped a 220,000-volt power line directly overhead. Guardsmen said the driver through he was as good as dead. Miraculously, part of the line fell ahead of the bulldozer and part behind. The lines spat and snaked for hours until power was cut off and the bulldozer was able to battle onward.

Shortly after midnight, the rescuers encounters a 14foot snowdrift sealing the entrance to Town Line 32. The bulldozer battered through the he drift and the rescuers finally transported some of the residents to homes with some form of heat.

Don't drive, police plead

Lawmen and snow removal officials today were pleading with residents not to drive on roads.

One warned that the task of clearing the highways outside towns may take three or four days.

Sheriff John Borgia said motorists who hamper rescue operations or drive unnecessarily will be cited.

Drifts up to 14-feet high have been encountered by National Guard bulldozers.

Huron County roads are "one hell of a mess," said assistant Supt. Mike Sweet this morning. He said two county snow plows are still stuck on Washington Road west of Norwalk after they helped free an ambulance and fire department truck.

Families cope without heat

Power went out in the Old Plank Road area north of Norwalk at 5:15 a.m. Thursday and was still off this

Mrs. Robert Sukke, a Reflector composing room employee who lives on Old Plank Road, said they have no word on when service is likely to be restored.

Power failure has meant lack of heat and water service in most of the homes in the area. The water comes from wells with electric pumps.

The Sukkes have an oil furnace in their home, but without power the electric pump for the oil was out of service. They stayed in their home until 4 p.m. Thursday when the temperature had dropped to 48 degrees inside the house. They decided to go to a neighbor, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Latham, who have a wood-burning stove in their basement.

'Sharing' is key to survival in storm's aftermath

AVERY – Certain-Teed Products Corp., opened its plant's doors to 200 stranded motorists and truck drivers during the blizzard and its aftermath. Some of the truck drivers were still there this morning.

The plant is on U.S. 250 near exit seven of the Ohio Turnpike.

Robert Sears, a truck driver for Kroger Co., this morning was full of praise for the company.

"They gave us a warm place to stay, access to telephones, rest rooms and showers and even gave the truck drivers fuel oil with no concern about being paid. Those people were great and really deserve credit," said Sears.

Sears was on his way from Solon to Port Clinton with a load of produce when his truck got stuck on the Ohio Turnpike just above the Sandusky-Norwalk exit about 9:15 a.m. Thursday. The National Guard rescued him about 3:30 a.m. Friday and took him and other stranded motorists — including families with children - to the Certain-Teed plant.

"There were hot food vending machines in the plant but they were emptied in about 20 minutes," said Sears. "Some of those people had had nothing to eat all day Thursday," He said that the Red Cross was supposed to send food but when it failed to arrive the National Guard asked what he had had in his truck.

He told them 170 tins of bread, cheese, eggs and fruits and vegetables. Sears called the company to see if it was all right to give the food away.

"There was no hesitation," reported Sears. "I have worked for the company for 18 years and I was really proud of them. There was no concern about getting paid."

Charles Smith, manager of Certain-Teed, said Lawson's allowed one of their drivers to share the milk in his truck and an Allied Vans driver dragged out furniture pads from his truck for people to sleep on..

...Smith said paper mill superintendent Bob Weidinger and about 34 Certain-Teed employees were stranded at the plant when the blizzard hit early Thurs-

Alcohol can also result in affect of the mental state of someone when used too much or too often. Alcohol can also affect a person's actions so driving while intoxicated cannot only cause a threat to the driver, but also other drivers on the road. It is common in modern days that people use alcoholic beverages and drugs in wrong ways, but if they had known what a risk they were taking and how dangerous it was, they may not have done their wrong doings.

Another major topic we learned in D.A.R.E is risk and consequence. We learned that we take risks every time we make a decision that could result in different ways. We learned that risks and consequences can be good also. For example if I risked doing my chores without being asked, and that that risk has a consequence can help someone make better choices. I will remember this when ever I am trying to make a hard choice.

The final major topic we learned in D.A.R.E is how to avoid wrong situations and how to keep our cool when we are frustrated. We learned in D.A.R.E that there are some situations that we would need and want to talk about is drugs to avoid. When these situations and alcohol. I learned that not occur we learned five ways to get out of those situations. The first strategy is saying no while giving an excuse. The next few strategies are avoiding the situation, walking away and saying no, changing the subject, and hanging around with people who are making good choices. We also learned how to know when we are frustrated and how to keep our cool when we are frustrated. Signs of stress and frustration is feeling hot or cold, when we are sick to the stomach, when we feel mentally exhausted, and when we feel like we are carrying the weight of the world. We can keep cool in these situations by walking away or by talking to someone about the problem. With this lesson I learned how important it is to keep my cool and avoid stressful situations and wrong situa-

Because of D.A.R.E I now know a lot more. I can use this knowledge throughout my life. This knowledge can help me to make correct choices, to keep my cool, and to be a better person in my community. I thank D.A.R.E and my D.A.R.E Officer for helping me to know and understand this important information. D.A.R.E is definitely a good example that should continue to be taught so that it can help us to become better citizens.

open Jan. 29.

In an effort to streamline the process, the Foundation has made it easier than ever to apply with a complete listing of available scholarships, qualifications, and applications on its website. The scholarship deadline is March 9 and the recipients will be notified in May.

Scholarship recipients are selected based on the criteria established by donors who created the funds to support gifted and deserving students by assisting them with the costs of their education.
