SHOOTING

Sheriff Geoff Dean said in the parking lot. "There's blood everywhere."

Survivors of the rampage — mostly young people who had gone out for college night at the Borderline, a hangout popular with students from nearby California Lutheran University and other schools — seemed to know what to do, having come of age in an era of active-shooter drills and deadly rampages happening with terrifying frequency.

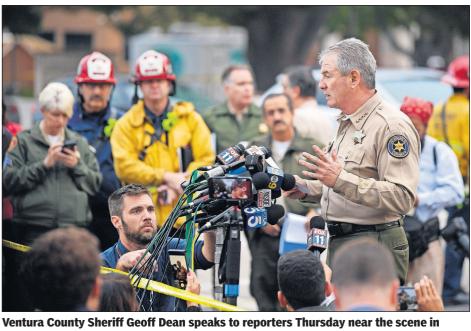

Several of the survivors said they were also at the outdoor country music festival in Las Vegas last year when a gunman in a high-rise hotel killed 58 people.

Many of the estimated 150 patrons at the Borderline dived under tables, ran for exits, broke through windows or hid in the attic and bathrooms, authorities and witnesses said.

"Unfortunately, our young people, people at nightclubs, have learned that this may happen, and they think about that," the sheriff said. "Fortunately, it helped save a lot of lives that they fled the scene so rapidly."

Matt Wennerstrom said he pulled people behind a pool table, and he and friends shielded women with their bodies after hearing the shots. When the gunman paused to reload, Wennerstrom said, he and others shattered windows with barstools and helped about 30 people escape. He heard another volley of shots once he was safely outside.

"All I wanted to do was get as many people out of there as possible," he told KABC-TV. "I know where I'm going if I die, so I was not worried."

A video posted on Instagram after the shooting by one of the patrons showed an empty dance floor with sound of windows breaking in the background. As a silhouetted figure entered a doorway, the camera turned erratically and 10 gunshots rang out.

"I looked him in his eyes while he killed my friends," Dallas Knapp wrote on his post. "I hope he rots in hell for eternity."

During a break in the gunfire, Knapp bolted out a door, yelling, "Run, he's coming out this door."

The tragedy left a community that is annually listed as one of the safest cities in America reeling. Shootings of any kind are extremely rare in Thousand Oaks, a city of about 130,000 people about 40 miles from Los Angeles, just across the county line.

It was the nation's deadliest such attack since 17 students and teachers were killed at a Parkland, Fla., high school nine months ago. It also came less than two weeks after a gunman massacred 11 people at a synagogue in Pittsburgh. Democratic Gov.-elect Gavin Newsom, in his first public appearance since winning office on Tuesday, lamented the violence that has come again to California.

"It's a gun culture," he said. "You can't go to a bar or nightclub? You can't go to church or synagogue? It's insane is the only way to describe it. The normalization, that's the only way I can describe it. It's become normalized."

President Donald Trump praised police for their "great bravery" in the attack and ordered flags flown at half-staff in honor of the victims. Authorities searched Long's home in Newbury Park, about 5 miles from the Borderline bar, for clues to what set him off.

"There's no indication that he targeted the employees. We haven't found any correlation," the sheriff said. "Maybe there was a motive for this particular night, but we have no information leading to that at all."

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Daughter given everything gives heartache in return

DEAR ABBY: Ever since high school, our adult daughter has had mood swings. My wife and I thought she'd grow out of it as she matured, but she hasn't. At her request we sent her to a university far away, and we were proud that she earned her bachelor's degree. We thought independent living would do the trick, but her personality and behavior toward us didn't change.

She's an only child, and we spoiled her — bought her cars and paid for college. I asked her to try for scholarships to help us out, but she didn't. She married and had two wonderful kids, but her mood swings persist. When I mentioned she see a counselor or therapist as a way to get some third-party advice and sort things out, she hit the ceiling and told me I was the one who needs therapy. Then she brought up my flaws and my past drinking problem. Granted, I have made mistakes, and I'm not perfect, but I've learned and grown.

After 10 years she divorced her husband. She got custody of the kids and the house. Her divorce cost us a great deal of money. Her authoritative and moody behavior is affecting our grandchildren.

I love my daughter very much and always have. If you were in my shoes, Abby, what would you do for a more healthy and loving relationship for all involved?

STILL HER DAD IN FLORIDA

DEAR DAD: I would look back and examine all the things I did to foster her behavior. An example would be paying for her divorce. Then I would stop doing them and not resume until she agreed to consult a psychotherapist about her mood swings. Don't do it for her or for yourself. Do it for the sake of your grandchildren.

DEAR ABBY: Before I met my boyfriend of eight months, I planned a 10-day Japan vacation for next year with my best guy friend, "J." We have been friends for eight years, and have never had any romantic interest in each other. Both of us want to visit Japan because it's on our bucket list.

J and I were both single when we started making plans. Then I met my boyfriend. My boyfriend knew from the beginning that this trip was going to happen next year. Because the date wasn't "set in stone" or paid for until recently, my boyfriend thinks I should have called it off. He says I'm making the trip and my friend a higher priority than him, and his feelings are hurt. He said if I was going with a female friend he wouldn't care.

I still want to take the trip. I feel canceling would be betraying my friend J. Am I being a bad girlfriend?

TRIPPED UP IN THE

DEAR TRIPPED UP: A "bad" girlfriend? No. An independent one, yes. You say your boyfriend has known about this from the beginning, so this wasn't a surprise to him. If he was more secure about himself and your relationship, he would know that J isn't a threat. Not only should you take the trip, you should also use the time away to decide if you want a life partner as insecure as your boyfriend appears to be.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

POMANDER FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Dear Readers: One of my favorite things about the holiday season is the wonderful fun of rich fragrances that fill my home. I make my own POMANDER BALLS for ornaments for the tree, or to hang in a closet or a guest bathroom

Here's how to make them:

Stick rows of whole cloves in an orange or apple. After each piece of fruit is completely covered with cloves, allow it to dry in a cool place for as long as possible.

After the fruit has dried completely, make a mixture of 1 part orris root (available in drugstores) and 1 part mixed spices, such as cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg.

Coat the fruit with the spices and leave for two weeks. Shake off excess spice, and tie each fruit with ribbon, making a loop at the top for a hanger. The fragrance is phenomenal! I hope they will enrich your home as

SMART SAFETY IDEA

Dear Heloise: The GPS for my car asked for my home address. Instead, I put the address of a doughnut shop down the street into my GPS system. This way, I'm protected if a thief steals my car and garage opener, because he won't be able to access my home or know where I live. — Lisa T., Lubbock, Texas

LOSE FOR A CRUISE?

Dear Heloise: A while ago, Maggie J. in Orlando offered tips on what to pack for a cruise. She mentioned taking an extension cord and a power strip. Please let your readers know that some cruise lines do not allow these two items. This is for everyone's safety.

WATERY POTATO SALAD

Dear Heloise: Help! Every time I make potato salad, the next day it is watery. — Barbara F., via email

Barbara, cut up your potatoes before cooking them, and let them completely cool off afterward before adding dressing. Hot potatoes give off steam and contribute to the watery problems. You also might consider using russet potatoes, as they tend to be drier. Don't use a "light" mayonnaise, because it usually is thinner. — Heloise

CAST IRON RESTORATION

Dear Heloise: My mother gave me a cast iron skillet that has rust spots on it. How can I clean it? — Gwendolyn in Arkansas

Gwendolyn, the best method for cleaning a rusty cast iron skillet is to use a nonmetallic scrubber to remove the rust, then wash afterward with a mild soap, making sure to rinse well and dry with a clean towel. Re-season the skillet by coating it (inside and out) with an unsalted vegetable shortening. Place the greased skillet upside down on a foil-covered baking sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Let cool, then remove excess grease with a paper towel. — Heloise

Do your kids a favor: Pick retirement savings over tuition

BY KEVIN VOIGT ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most financial planners advise never tapping retirement savings to pay for your kid's education. Even as college costs climb, there are still options to borrow that cash, whereas it's often noted that you can't borrow for retire-

Yet about one-third of Americans with kids under 18 say they plan to use retirement savings or "could use if needed" to help pay for their children's education, according to a recent survey by Sallie Mae, one of the nation's largest student loan lenders.

The good news for retirement savings is that number is declining — in the 2016 edition of Sallie Mae's survey, 39 percent of parents said they planned or may use retirement savings as a last resort to fund their children's education.

More parents are now thinking twice about using retirement savings to fund college dreams, and here's why their hesitation is warranted.

LOST RETIREMENT SAV-INGS COULD HURT YOU

Paying for school from a tax-advantaged employer retirement account like a 401(k) can hurt you in several ways:

-A 10 percent tax penalty on early withdrawals below age

-A potentially bigger tax bill the year of withdrawal as the money you withdraw is counted as income.

-Loss of tax-free growth of your savings. Unlike taxable investment accounts, where you may have to pay the IRS annually for capital gains, employersponsored retirement accounts can grow tax-free.

-Less benefit from compounding. Early withdrawals will erode your portfolio's growth potential.

But if you're going to tap into your retirement savings, experts say the "least worst' option is to fund a Roth IRA . Unlike qualifying contributions to a 401(k) or traditional IRA, Roth IRA contributions aren't tax-exempt. But as a result, there are also fewer restrictions on early withdrawals.

"You can withdraw any Roth IRA contributions that you've made without penalty," says Crystal Wipperfurth, a certified financial planner with Bronfman Rothschild in Madison, Wisconsin. "This is not ideal, because it reduces your retirement savings, but it is an option."

IT COULD HURT YOUR KIDS, TOO

Tapping your retirement savings can boomerang to hurt your kids if they need to provide financial help for you

In this Oct. 23, file photo, students walk on the campus of Miami Dade College, in Miami. Most financial planners advise never tapping retirement savings to pay for your kid's education. Even as college costs climb, there are still options to borrow that cash, whereas it's often noted that you can't borrow for retirement.

in your later years.

"We see clients want to help their kids through college at the expense of their own retirement, and we always advise against it," says Matt Ahrens, a financial advisor at Integrity Advisory in Overland Park, Kansas. "Parents have to understand that sacrificing to help their kids through college may only put more stress on their children when they see their parents struggling financially in retirement.'

A more immediate blow: Using your retirement funds could hurt your child's ability to qualify for student aid. Why? The cash is considered "ordinary income" and may put your total wages for the year beyond what qualifies for assistance.

Because retirement accounts aren't counted when considering if a family economically qualifies, "funding your 401(k) or 403(b) is an advantage for college financial aid," says Kimberly J. Howard, a certified financial planner with KJH Financial Services in Newton, Massachusetts.

Cash them out, and that exclusion goes away A 529 PLAN IS THE BEST WAY TO SAVE

More Americans tuck college savings into ordinary bank accounts (45 percent) than a 529 savings plan (29 percent), according to the 2018 Sallie Mae survey. But 529 plan investments have much more earning potential than an ordinary savings account, which often grows less than 1% a year. "Parents of young children should start a 529 fund right away, and add money every month. Every little bit helps, and it will have the advantage of years of compounding,' Ahrens says.

"The first savings a family should make should be into their retirement account at work in order to get their company match. Then the remaining savings can be split between retirement — either at work or into a Roth IRA — and a college savings plan, like a 529 plan," says Derek Hagen, a certified financial planner with Hagen Financial in Minnetonka, Minnesota.

Bottlenose dolphin born at SeaWorld

BY ROB NIKOLEWSKI

THE SAN DIEGO UNION-TRIBUNE (TNS)

It wasn't "Day of the Dolphin" on Monday, afternoon but "Day of the Baby Dolphin" at SeaWorld as a 700-pound bottlenose dolphin gave birth to a calf weighing about 40 pounds.

After a 12-month gestation period, the calf was born at 4:37 p.m. Nov. 5, at Dolphin Amphitheater.

The calf and 29-year-old mother Melanie each appear to be in good health, with SeaWorld officials saying they are swimming together and bonding.

As with any birth, the first few days are critical and Sea-World's animal care and veterinary teams are monitoring the baby and mother. "All last night we watched the baby closely, (it is) swimming strongly, nursing a ton, and Melanie is doing excellent," said Brian Rokeach, senior dolphin trainer. "We couldn't be more excited." The calf, whose gender will be determined through DNA tests in the coming weeks, is Melanie's third. Her first calf was born in 1998 and her second was born in 2000. According to researchers, female dolphins up to 48 years of age can successfully give birth and raise young. SeaWorld officials describe Melanie as a very good and Eighty-two dolphin calves have been born since SeaWorld opened 54 years ago. The last birth was in 2015.

Following several weeks in the hospital and then time recovering at home, the police officer returned to duty in May after passing his physical evaluation and firearms certification, as previously featured in a Bellefontaine Examiner story.

While also welcoming Officer Simpson to the stage, Sgt. Marlow offered an official Letter of Commendation to the individuals who played the crucial role in attaining medical assistance on that critical day -Officers Jerrod Hostetler, Mike Morgan, Brad Staley and Nathan Wise; dispatchers Kim Tackett, Amber Balling and Pete Hager; and Doug Hager and Bryce Goodrich from the Bellefontaine Fire and EMS Department.

"We couldn't be happier that he's back to serve with his brothers and sisters in the police department," the sergeant said. "And most importantly, that he's back home with his family.

"Thank you guys. I love you all," Officer Simpson said during an emotional speech. "I wouldn't be here today if it wasn't for you."

Also during the awards program and dinner hosted by the Bellefontaine First Church of God, 1000 E. Brown Ave., keynote speaker United States Secret Service Agent Kevin Dye provided insights about the importance of the work offered by local law enforcement to his line of work with the Dayton Resident Office as its agent in charge.

"I want to thank each of you for your service to your community, your state and your nation," he said.

'I was in Cleveland with the President on Monday, and we couldn't have pulled that off without the help of local law enforcement — police officers, deputies and state troopers.

"The Secret Service is a small group of 3,000 agents. We know that we'll continue to survive with your help."

He also told the officers and police department personnel that he was impressed with the local support in the Bellefontaine and Logan County community.

"I've never seen anything like a banquet like this," he said. "I think it's wonderful that the community takes the time out to thank its officers and dispatchers." During the ceremony, Chief Brandon Standley and Lt. Rick Herring unveiled Officer of the Year and Dispatcher of the Year Awards that were voted on by the department's personnel.

Fellow employees selected Officer Jacob Siekierka as the 2018 Officer of the Year, with many individuals in their nominations relating his "positive attitude," the police chief said. "He is well-liked for many reasons."

Nikki Chambers received the 2018 Dispatcher of the Year Award, with her colleagues praising her dedication to her profession.

"Nikki's work in dispatch is top-notch," Chief Standley said. "She is quick to pick up on mistakes and she is good at handling 911."

Double accolades were received by Officer Doug Walters, who received the 2018 American Legion Award and a Special Commendation for his work as a Bellefontaine High School resource officer.

Officer Andrew Kennedy also received a Special Commendation for his work as a school resource officer and his careful planning of the recent DARE camp.

militarization at the border," said Juan, who was one of several speakers at a news conference in Phoenix on Thursday. "Having an increased presence of military is scary, you know. It's scary.'

Juan is a member of the Tohono O'odham Nation, which sits on about 75 miles along the international border. Residents of the reservation have long had a complicated relationship with the U.S. Border Patrol, and its leadership has been vocal about its opposition to the president's plans for a border wall.

"I find the fact that the military is being deployed absolutely terrifying. The amount of militarization that we already experience on a daily basis and that we are currently living under is like living in a waking nightmare," said Eva Lewis, a resident of the small town of Arivaca just north of the U.S.-Mexico border.

Many residents of Arivaca have spent years battling the Border Patrol's checkpoints, which require everyone who cross them to stop and declare whether they are citizens. Trips to school or the grocery store require passing through checkpoints, and many residents say that agents discriminate against Latinos in the area, a claim the agency denies.

In Nogales, Arizona, which shares a name with its neighbor to the south, residents said they were distressed, confused and shocked when the military showed up on election day to install barbed wire on a border fence, according to the Nogales International newspaper.

As of Thursday, there are over 5,600 troops deployed at the border. There are 2,800 in Texas, while 1,500 are in Arizona and another 1,300 are in California.

The military expects to have most of the over 7,000 troops planned for the mission deployed by Monday. A spokesperson for the Department of Defense could not be reached Thursday. But not everyone opposes the military presence.

Jim Chilton, an Arizona border rancher and staunch Trump supporter, said in a news release to the AP this week that he looks forward to the arrival of more troops. Chilton said the 25 miles of international border in Arivaca is poorly secured and actively sees drug smuggling and human trafficking.

"The lack of access and infrastructure, cartel scout presence, and rough terrain and inefficient 'defense in depth' strategy creates a de facto 'no man's land' in which border ranchers live and work," Chilton said.

Despite rhetoric about the Central American migrant caravan, those who gave their lives for us. We honor those valiant soldiers, sailors and airmen who risked and lost their lives protecting their homeland. We should also take the time to remember not just those who fought our wars but all those who lost their lives in wars the innocent civilians who were the victims of conflict." It wasn't until nearly eight years after the armistice between Germany and the Allies, that on June 4, 1926, the U.S. Congress officially recognized the end of World War I when it passed a resolution that begins with these words: "the 11th of November 1918, marked the cessation of the most destructive, sanguinary, and far reaching war in human annals and the resumption by the people of the United States of peaceful relations with other nations, which we hope may never again be severed.'

Although the U.S. was late entering World War I, American bomber pilots were quick very early in the war to join in battle. So many of them "enlisted" that a separate unit of the French Air Service called the Lafayette Escadrille was created for U.S. flyers. It was named in honor of the Marquis de Lafayette, a passionate supported the American Revolution who was given the rank of major general by the Continental Congress.

The red poppy became a symbol of peace and Armistice Day, after Treaty of Versailles was signed on Nov. 11, 1918. Wearing the poppy flower quickly became a way of publicly acknowledging the horrors of that war and the sacrifices that were made. Some still wear the poppy. Fewer of us can remember the poem that spawned the symbol — a mournful lament written by John McCrae, a Canadian soldier, in May 1915 at the height of World War I.

There'll be parades, ceremonies and observances throughout the U.S. and Canada underscoring the significance of the armistice. In the U.K. as many as 5,000 church bells throughout the country will ring out in unison at 11 a.m. Nov. 11. And, in France, which saw more than its fair share of the carnage, the commemoration of the armistice will focus on some of the bloodiest battles, including the battles of Verdun, the Somme, Amiens and Vimy Ridge.

In Australia and New Zealand, they call it Remembrance Day in honor of the tens of thousands of ANZAC troops who died in battles half way around the world, including the devastating battle of the Gallipoli Peninsula in Turkey. The Association of Mature

"We're constantly looking at the way the game is changing organically and trying to balance the competitive issues with our clubs and our GMs doing everything possible to win versus what those decisions result in in terms of the product on the field. And it's not an easy balance, but we work very hard at it.'

Agreement with the union is necessary for playing rules changes, but management has the right to unilaterally implement a new playing rule with one year advance notice. Commissioner Rob Manfred had the right to mandate pitch clocks for 2018 but backed off when the union refused to agree, and he retains the ability to order clocks for 2019.

MLB did initiate limits on mound trips without pitching changes in 2018, and the average time of a nine-inning game dropped to 3 hours, 44 seconds during the regular season from 3:05:11 in 2017 — although it rose to 3:34:50 this postseason from 3:29:28 in 2017. "It's going in the right direction," Halem said.

Non-playing rules changes require agreement with players. Halem called the situation fluid, said he isn't certain when management and the union will meet and set spring training as the deadline to determine any actions.

Car show raises funds for Ohio Veterans Home

By Martha Jacob

Members of the Tri-State Chevelle Club recently made another donation to the Ohio Veterans Home in Georgetown's Fund. The group presented a check for $5,000 to the fund bringing the groups contributions total to over $12,000.

President of the Tri-State Chevelle Club, Jeff Condo said that this year's big car show, which had been held at the veterans home had to be moved to the Brown County Fairgrounds because it has grown so big.

"This year our show was held at the fairgrounds because we had over 50 Chev ells on display," Condo said. "This year marked our 3rd year for the car show and we had a great turnout.'

During the early 1960's, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler the compact Rambler was hugely popular and the leading small car for several years. So in response to it's popularity, Chevrolet came out in 1964 with the Chevelle which was compatible to other Chevrolet models.

Chevelle's continued to grow in success will be used for veteran activities.

The Chevelle was produced from 1964 until 1977. Body styles include coupes, sedans, convertibles and station Wagons.

Through the years collectors of the unique Chevelle muscle cars continue to draw a lot of attention.

"Membership to our club is up to about 26 members,"

Condo said. "We appreciate all the support we receive from the communities and of course we appreciate all the donations and contributions we receive that goes straight to our American Veterans. We love helping them out.

"We would like to invite anyone who has any interest in joining our club, the Tri-State Chevelle Club to give us a call at (513) 319-6421.
