After reading some of the most recent comments, I would like to respond to the recent flurry of pro wind comments. Much like the public hearing, where 16 of the 20 pro wind speakers were by leaseholders, the only people who speak or write in favor of Emerson Creek are the relatively few families who will receive or have received payments from APEX, or people who will live miles and miles away from the project. If wind energy is the panacea for climate change claimed by its backers, one would think you would find more erudite individuals to speak on behalf of wind. That certainly was not the case on August 20, 2020. We all know wind energy is intermittent, resource intensive, tax payer subsidized and harmful to the environment in multiple ways. When you speak at a public hearing, you better be ready for questions. APEX and its minions still believe that the approval of their project is a done deal. For Ms. Fry and the leaseholders in Erie and Huron County and for those who support wind development in my community, I have just one phrase for all of you. I have not yet begun to fight!
