COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

Since AEP was approved for the 7% increase per year for the next two years and 6% for the third year, I would like to know if they will be held accountable for 7% less power outages per year. My electric power was off for more than 8 days last year during the windstorms from Hurricane Ike. Does the PUCO have access to the plan AEP has developed to do to prevent this type of problem in the future, namely is this rate being funneled into preventative maintenance, or is it going for bonus payments to executives? Several of my neighbors would also be interested in this. Thank you for your time. Sharon Lewis
