and Europe were canceled, part of a global disruption in air travel as clouds of ash from a volcano in Iceland forced widespread closures of European airports.

At least 100 U.S. flights had been canceled by early Thursday afternoon, according to David Castelveter, a spokesman for the Air Transportation Assn., which represents most major U.S. carriers.

Most of the canceled U.S. flights were to the United Kingdom or from there, he said. Some airlines were also canceling flights scheduled for today, he said.

Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Laura Brown said the agency was working diverted from their intended destination to other Europe airports as closures mounted.

Volcanic eruptions rarely interrupt commercial air travel, but some large ash clouds high in the atmosphere have the potential to stall or shut down jet engines.

Airports in Britain, Ireland and Nordic countries were closed first. By late Thursday morning France had closed 23 airports, including Paris airports.

But flights to other destinations are also affected. Brown said the route for most flights from the U.S. East Coast to Europe crosses the North Atlantic near the ash cloud.

Mother, Sister

#1
Mom's life is a beautiful memory,
Her death is a silent grief,
She sleeps in God's beautiful garden,
In sunshine of perfect peace; we will miss her, oh how well, but realize
God knew best,
He let us have her many years,
Then gently bade her rest.
#4
We know that she is happy
In our Saviour's Home above,
Growing fairer as she lingers
In the Sunshine of his love.
