COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

I am writing to you about what Duke Energy is about to request. The city of Cincinnati, Ohio has voted to have a "street car" here in Cincinnati to run from downtown to Findlay Market and back to downtown. The city does not have the funds to take this project and pay all the expenses to get it running. The city does not want to incur the cost of re-routing and digging up the electric lines. Duke Energy feels that they should not bear the burden and cost of this project. Somehow the two, throughtalking and negociating with each other, by a judges order Duke Energy may have to bear part of the cost. Duke Energy has already said that they will pas this on to the consumer. Since when is Duke Energy in politics to help the city of Cincinnati to fund one of their projects. The rat increase that Duke Energy is about to ask you for should be denied. Duke Energy has already stated that a certain per cent of the rate increase will go to the City of Cincinnati to help the city to pay for the cost of digging up the electric lines and re-routing them. I feel this totally wrong for Duke Energy to take this position on a city matter. I look forward to hearing your thought on this matter. Thank You
