Speech team competes

The Clear Fork High School Speech Team competed at the Knox County Speech Contest on April 16.

Each student picked their speech category and the material they performed. Majja Johnson performed a dramatic piece from The Diary of Anne Frank. Tucker Boggs performed a dramatic piece from Frankenstein. Kaitie Ellington performed a poem entitled "Here's Lies" and Eli Novak performed a speech from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar. Hannah Bloir delivered an original oratory concerning what we as humans spend our time thinking about, while Alice Swinsinski delivered an original speech about regrets. Jake Hamilton gave Mark Twain's How to Tell a Story speech, and Stuart Brenkus performed a Harvard graduation speech. David McKinley Boggs performed a comedy piece about school. Maria Zaller delivered Robert F. Kennedy's Kindness Menace of Violence speech.

All team members performed a skit they wrote in the chamber theater category entitled "The Life of a Substitute

Taking first place in their respective categories Eli Novak, Maria Zaller and Jake Hamilton pose with their awards after the speech competition held in Knox County earlier this month.

Association to host retirement seminar

A free seminar will be sponsored by the Richland County Retired Teachers Association on Thursday, May 22. The seminar entitled "Retirement Countdown" led by Tamia Cole, STRS Education specialist, will be free for ALL actively employed teachers and their spouses. It will be most helpful for educators who are 12-18 months from retirement, but it will include information for those who are five years out as well. Topics to be covered are how to calculate your final average salary, payment options for receiving STRS benefits, how and when to purchase service credit, health care changes and legislated pension reform that Affects everyone after July 2015. Preregistered attendees will receive a take home workbook to aid them in retirement planning. The past programs have been very informative and helpful, according to attendees.

The seminar will be held Thursday, May 22, 2014 at the Main Street Methodist Church Fellowship Hall, 230 S. Main St., located at the Y point of Rts. 13 and 42 in Mansfield. There is free parking next to the church and it is handicap accessible.

The program will open with registration and a light supper from 4:30-5 p.m. followed by a welcome and then the presentation at 5:15 p.m. To plan for workbooks and supper, one will need to preregister by Monday, May 19, 2014. To register call Mary Thomas (419) 884-2721, or e-mail Marsha Jaenke at mjaenke@neo.rr.com

Musical to open this weekend

Public asked to participate in prince and princess parade

The Herald played by Matthew Koehneiser announcing plans for the big ball during musical practice last week.

By KATIE ELLINGTON

The students at Clear Fork High School will be bringing another classic fairytale to life this weekend with their production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's Cinderella.

The musical is directed by drama director James Michalovich and music director Karen Reazel, and it stars senior Alison Johnson and sophomore Tucker Boggs as Cinderella and Prince Charming.

Third year stage manager Sydney Wynn expressed confidence in everyone involved, stating that the cast and crew have "given one hundred and ten percent" to make the show a success. Johnson agreed, stating that the musical numbers and choreography "will keep you on the edge of your seat."

Younger audience members are invited to come dressed as prince and princesses for a costume parade that will occur a half hour before each performance. Each child involved will be given a gift.

"We're trying to make this a community production," said Michalovich of the idea. "The more people we can get involved—including the audience—the better." The performance times are 7:30 p.m. on Friday, April 25 and Saturday, April 26 and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 27. Tickets may be purchased in the high school office or by calling Cheryl Lantz at (419) 886-2601.

e gift not easy to care for ### fun: dyeing Easter eggs in shaving cream

FORKER al egg-dyeing method but potentially messier, this method involves filling a deep-sided baking pan or sheet with an inch of shaving cream — no more, to be thrifty — and then smoothing it so colors won't run together. Randomly add drops of two to four colors — more than that "creates brown or ugly green," says Barrand.

With a toothpick or lollipop stick, swirl the colors through the shaving cream, being careful not to over-mix. "Large swirls and loops will give the layering effect," writes Barrand in her blog.

Working from one end of the pan to the other in a straight line, roll a hard-boiled egg through the swirled colors and deposit it in an egg carton to dry. Wear rubber gloves or the food coloring will dye your hands.

Barrand could roll three eggs in a 9-by-9-inch pan before the colors muddled. When that occurs, rinse and dry the pan, add more shaving cream — don't use shaving gel — and start the process anew.

After 3 minutes, clean off an egg to check its color — likely a light pastel. For darker shades, wait 10 minutes so the food dye has more time to seep into the eggshell. The eggs will look as if they've been tie-dyed.

If you're concerned about using shaving cream on an edible egg, use whipping cream instead, Barrand said. Or blow out the eggs before coloring them.

"An eggshell is porous, so technically if you left it for like a day, I wouldn't recommend eating it, but it's only in the shaving cream for a few minutes," Barrand said. "My kids totally ate all the eggs."

Use a glass pan, if you have it; the liquid color may stain metal pans where they're scratched or pitted. Create new colors in glass cups before dropping them into the shaving cream.

"Our kids enjoyed every part. With the old tablets and vinegar, they always got bored and thought it smelled," Barrand says in her blog.
