PUCO

Windmills aren't good for our health because they are loud when making power and they produce low frequency noise which will keep us from sleeping and getting a good nights rest, and you know everyone needs that to keep going.

There's always that possibility that one will malfunction and a blade will fall off. What about ice? it will build up on the blades and when it's melting it ~~will~~ can be slung up to half mile with the blade turning at 175 mph.

will it
land?

I think they're not economical because they don't produce energy in July, August, and September, when we need it most, but ~~they~~ are using energy off the grid for the brakes and lights.

I think if they want to build windmill they should at least find a place with no ~~peopl~~ people which would definately exclude Greenwich oh.
