Case #14.1754

Regarding the gasline for the new electric generator plant in Oregon. I was under the impression it would run through vacant land or farm land. We received the plans and realized it would have a 50-100ft right away and would be about 50 ft from our bedrooms. I don't want to go to bed every night, not knowing if there might be a problem that night. I am 74 years old and planned to downsize but we probably would lose 1/2 of the value of our property, even if we could sell it. I know imminent domain, a right to steal someone's property, is a law from the 1800's so the RR could acquire land for the RR and it helped to open up the country. It was never intended for some company to take and give you practically nothing for it. And we still have to take care of the right away and pay taxes on it.

Why can't they buy the whole property , so we don't have to worry about any danger from this? This is the only time I have asked for anything from the government. I'd appreciate any help you can give.

Sincerely,

Bill and Joan Hanner-----
