COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

I am very concerned about the proposed increase of the annual customer fee charged by Duke Energy from $72 to $273. This is a dramatic increase that will disproportionately impact those who can least afford it, low and middle income residential customers. Why is the increase not proportional based on use? If the increase is needed to improve service/safety or switch to cleaner energy, I can support the need for such an increase, but why not a gradual increase over five years? And while I may be wrong about this detail, I have been informed that the increase applies only to residential customers, and I am concerned that Duke Energy is catering unfairly to commercial/industrial consumers at the expense of the average household. I sincerely hope that information is soon released first of all explaining clearly why such an increase is necessary, how it will be absorbed by all rate-payers, and clarifying that the amount of the increase will be reasonable even for those living on a tight budget.
