COMMENT DESCRIPTION:

I am writing to express my view on Duke Energy's request to raise the fixed costs of customers electric bill. I am against this because I feel like it disproportionately affects those of us who live modestly and in small houses and apartments. I might be wrong but from what I understand if a customer uses let's say 2,000 kWh their bill will probably go down where as my bill will go up by how much if I only average 200-300 kWh a month? If everyone's bill went up a $1 or $2 I wouldn't have an objection but my bill is going to jump how much? $15? $20 while other people's is only going to go up 1 or 2% and yet other people's and company's bills are going to lower? I already think it's a shame that both the lady that lives upstairs (my wife and I live in a 2 family home) and we BOTH have to pay these fixed charges for gas and electric when we live in the same house but there are 2 meters. I think the fixed gas charge and riders is outrageous and a shame to be helping investors get rich off our backs. But back to the proposed electric increase. Please don't penalize us that are trying to make a difference in the world by being conscious about our energy usage and carbon footprint which is what you'll be doing if you raise the fixed rates and lower the variable rates
