Tolerance

When you hear the word “tolerance” what comes to mind? It certainly gets tossed around a lot. An article I read recently gave the definition of this: true tolerance is a willingness to acknowledge the beliefs of others in spite, not in absence, of disagreement.

Therefore if I have an opinion that disagrees with yours, there's not a problem as long as I don't demand tolerance for my view without being tolerant of yours. I think that's where the divide comes. Some people are so adamant about their view being the only view allowed. Maybe even going so far as to be not only vocal, but also belligerent.

There are many things that I would go to my grave defending. However for the right person in the right format I'd be willing to listen to their reasoning. Many times I've done this and although I usually haven't changed my mind it may have given me a different perspective on the issue.

My main reason for writing on the subject was to direct people if desired to read the article I did and gather your own thoughts on the subject. It was a Facebook feed by Focus on the Family around July 17th or 18th. The title was USA Soccer: Tolerance for me; but not for thee.

I can be tolerant of most anything. That doesn't mean I agree. If I don't agree I won't protest, I won't send a hate email or letter to the editor. I'll simply go on with my life and attempt to live as I feel God has expected me to.

I realize sometimes silence can be mistaken for approval, so there is a time to speak up for our beliefs. I think we need to be careful though of thoughts versus opinions versus beliefs.

Remember if you are preaching tolerance, realize what you are asking. It's a two way street or else it's coercion.
