OPSB my name is Karen im writing this in support of the Yellow Wood Solar project and all solar projects in Clinton and Highland Counties. I understand people are scared of change and fear the unknown, but this country was built on change, unknown, progress, and technology. It is a fact we can not stop any of those four. I grew up in Adams County and now live in Clinton County. I have been a nurse now for 28 years. My career is proof unknown, change, progress, and technology can't be stopped. Some of those changes and progressions have be good and some not so good, but we didn't know until we tried them. I have had to adjust with the changes and in the last year myself as a nurse has had to do a lot of adapting to keep myself my staff and patients safe. Don't get me wrong it hasn't been easy but I did what I had to do. Just like with solar many have had fears. In my opinion solar in this area could benefit a lot of people and the country it's all a part of technology and progress. I recently made a comment on a solar debate on Facebook which I'm going to include here and then ill explain my comment a little. -----My direct Facebook comment is as follows: "I usually don't comment on any of these post, I just sit back and read and laugh at some of these comments. However, I have my opinion and I guess I'm going to be like everyone else. From what I am seeing it boils down to jealousy because many of you don't own the property to sign up. Let me be the first to say I don't own the property to sign up either but I'm not the one griping about it. Where I come from I was taught to mind my own business and if it's not my property it's not my business. I see a lot of posts about the concrete going into the ground. A lot of you live in homes that sit on concrete foundations, how many yards of concrete are under your houses? And a lot of those houses are in town or inside the city limits. The view is going to be ruined are you willing to pay the farmers to keep your pretty farmland views? You are worried about your taxes and the amish are the only green farmers around, I agree they do very good work, but they don't pay taxes so they are also the only ones that get tax breaks. It's been said kids will be living in the middle of power plants kids have survived for many years living around oil fields and coal mines. I have been told if farmers don't want to farm anymore they should lease their land or sell and move, well everyone on here has the same options the farmers do. In the end these are just my opinions but it comes down to not my property not my business." ----- I caught some flack over this post,, but thats ok because what I have learned people want to voice their opinions and hear yours but only if is the same as theirs.. Being raised in Adams county we were taught to be good neighbors, mind our business and if it was ours to not bother it, if it didn't concern us keep our noses out of it. In my opinion the ones who are against solar are going to be against anything new and unknown. I personally don't see how this could possibly be a bad thing. In the end I am in support of the solar projects. Thank you for your time.
