NEWS BRIEFS

Swanton Kroger decreases hours

The Kroger store on Airport Highway in Swanton recently moved up its closing time from 11 p.m. to 10 p.m. The Swanton location is among several in the Toledo area now closing at 10 p.m., including the Holland location, the Monroe Street location in Sylvania and multiple in Toledo.

The Waterville and Maumee locations as well as the store on Sylvania Avenue at King Road remain open until 11 p.m. throughout the week.

“As America’s grocer, we are here for our customers and communities when they need us most. To better serve our customers and balance the needs of our associates we have adjusted closing hours recently at many locations,” said Amy McCormick, corporate affairs manager for Kroger. “In Swanton and Holland, the stores close at 10 p.m. Tailoring closing hours helps our associates be more efficient in the stocking process and improves the associate and customer experience.”

Pair pleads guilty to Capitol breach charge

A pair of Swanton residents pleaded guilty to actions related to the breach of the United States Capitol Building on Jan. 6, 2021. Gabriel Burruss and Madison Pettit pleaded guilty to parading, demonstrating, or picketing in a Capitol Building. That carries a maximum sentence of sixth months imprisonment, five years of probation and a $5,000 fine.

According to statement of offense from The United States District Court For the District of Columbia, when entering the Capitol, Burruss and Pettit passed broken windows on doors that had been forced open as Capitol alarms sounded. They wandered around the Rotunda taking photos. While they were in the Rotunda, Capitol Police formed a line and “began a push to get rioters to leave.” Burruss and Pettit were not among those that engaged police and they left voluntarily.

Florida judge blocks release of Bob Saget’s autopsy for now

Family sued to keep records from becoming public

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — A judge in Florida on Wednesday agreed with a request from the family of comedian Bob Saget and temporarily prohibited the release of any photos, video, or other records related to the investigation into his death, saying that doing so would cause them irreparable harm.

Mr. Saget’s wife, Kelly Rizzo, and his three daughters filed a lawsuit the previous day in Orlando, Fla., asking the state judge for a ruling that would prohibit the release of any records from the local medical examiner’s office and the Orange County Sheriff’s Office involving the probe into Mr. Saget’s death.

Circuit Judge Vincent Chiu issued the temporary injunction, saying that Mr. Saget’s family would suffer “severe mental pain, anguish, and emotional distress” if the request wasn’t granted. He said the injunction was in the public’s interest as he decides whether the family’s privacy concerns outweigh any claims for the records’ release.

Mr. Saget, 65, was found dead Jan. 9 in a room at the Ritz Carlton in Orlando. He had performed in the area the night before as part of a stand

Saget

An autopsy report showed that Mr. Saget had an abrasion on his scalp, a fracture at the base of his skull, fractures around his eye sockets, bleeding between the brain and tissue covering the brain as well as bruises to the brain. A toxicology analysis didn’t show any illicit drugs or toxins in his body.

During the course of the autopsy and death investigation, the medical examiner’s office and sheriff’s office created graphic videos and photos of Mr. Saget’s body, as well as audio recordings. Such records are prohibited by state law from being released publicly, but some media outlets have already filed requests for them, according to the family’s lawsuit.

“Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable harm in the form of extreme mental pain, anguish, and emotional distress if Defendants release the Records in response to public records requests or otherwise disseminate the records for any other reason or purpose,” their complaint said.

-up tour.

The medical examiner said last week that Mr. Saget had died from an accidental blow to the head, likely from a backwards fall.

Under a Florida law passed following the death of NASCAR legend Dale Earnhardt two decades ago, records related to autopsies are required to be kept confidential, with only surviving family members or a government agency as part of its official duties allowed to view them.

However, “upon a showing of good cause,” a court can allow the records to be viewed or copied under the supervision of the records’ custodian. In allowing the records to be viewed, a judge must consider whether it’s necessary to evaluate governmental performance and the seriousness of the intrusion into the family’s privacy, among other criteria, according to the law.

“No legitimate public interest would be served by the release or dissemination of the records to the public,” said the lawsuit by Mr. Saget’s family.

Mr. Saget was best known for his role as beloved single dad Danny Tanner on the sitcom Full House and as the wise-cracking host of America’s Funniest Home Videos. He was buried in Los Angeles.

FBI: Defendants in Arbery killing used repeated racial slurs online

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — Two of the three white men convicted of murdering Ahmaud Arbery repeatedly used racial slurs in text messages and social media posts, including some violent comments by Mr. Arbery’s shooter about Black people, an FBI witness testified Wednesday in their federal hate crimes trial.

FBI intelligence analyst Amy Vaughan led the jury through more than two dozen conversations that Travis McMichael and William “Roddie” Bryan had with others, identified only by their initials, in the months and years before the 25-year-old Black man’s killing. The FBI wasn’t able to access the phone of Greg McMichael, Travis McMichael’s father, because it was encrypted, Ms. Vaughan said.

In text and Facebook conversations with friends, Travis McMichael frequently used the N-word to describe Black people. In a Facebook conversation with a friend, he also shared a video of a young Black boy dancing on a TV show with a racist song that included the N-word playing over it. He also said that Black people “ruin everything” and said more than once he was glad he wasn’t a Black person, using a racial slur.

In other social media posts, Travis McMichael mentioned violence against Black people.

And in June, 2017, he shared a TV news story about a violent confrontation between two white women and two Black customers upset about cold food at a Georgia restaurant, using a racial slur to comment that he would beat the Black people “to death if they did that to [name redacted by the FBI] or my mother and sister.” He added that he would have no more remorse than putting down a rabid animal.

McMichael

Bryan

The McMichaels armed themselves and used a pickup truck to chase Mr. Arbery as he ran through their coastal Georgia neighborhood on Feb. 23, 2020. Bryan, a neighbor, joined the pursuit in his own truck and recorded cell phone video of Travis McMichael blasting Mr. Arbery with a shotgun. No arrests were made until the video leaked online two months later.

All three men were convicted of murder in a Georgia state court last fall. Their second trial began Monday in U.S. District Court on hate crime charges. Prosecutors say the McMichaels and Bryan violated Mr. Arbery’s civil rights and targeted him because he was Black.

Defense attorneys have insisted the deadly pursuit of Mr. Arbery was motivated by an earnest, though erroneous, suspicion that Mr. Arbery had committed crimes.

The hate crimes trial is being heard by a jury of eight white people, three Black people, and one Hispanic person.

Evidence presented in court Wednesday showed Bryan also used the N-word, but his preferred slur was a derogatory characterization of a Black person’s lips. Over a number of years, Bryan exchanged racist messages on Martin Luther King, Jr., Day that mocked the holiday. In messages sent in the days surrounding Mr. Arbery’s killing, Bryan was upset that his daughter was dating a Black man.

Greg McMichael posted a meme on Facebook in 2016 saying white Irish slaves were treated worse than any race in the United States but that the Irish aren’t asking for hand-outs.

“I ain’t really shocked,” Mr. Arbery’s father, Marcus Arbery, told reporters outside the courthouse. Still, he said he didn’t realize “all that hate was in those three men.”

Defense attorneys had few questions for the FBI analyst and didn’t dispute the racist posts. They said in their opening statements to the jury Monday that racist comments by their clients were offensive and indefensible but don’t prove that they committed hate crimes.

Travis McMichael’s attorney, Amy Lee Copeland, said some of his texts and posts lacked context, and “you can’t hear that inflection of voice and see what’s going on.”

Ms. Copeland also asked Derek Thomas, who posted the prank video that elicited a violent comment from Travis McMichael, about their long friendship. Mr. Thomas testified that they have known each other since high school and frequently went hunting and fishing together. He said he often checks up on Travis McMichael’s mother since the McMichaels’ arrests and convictions.

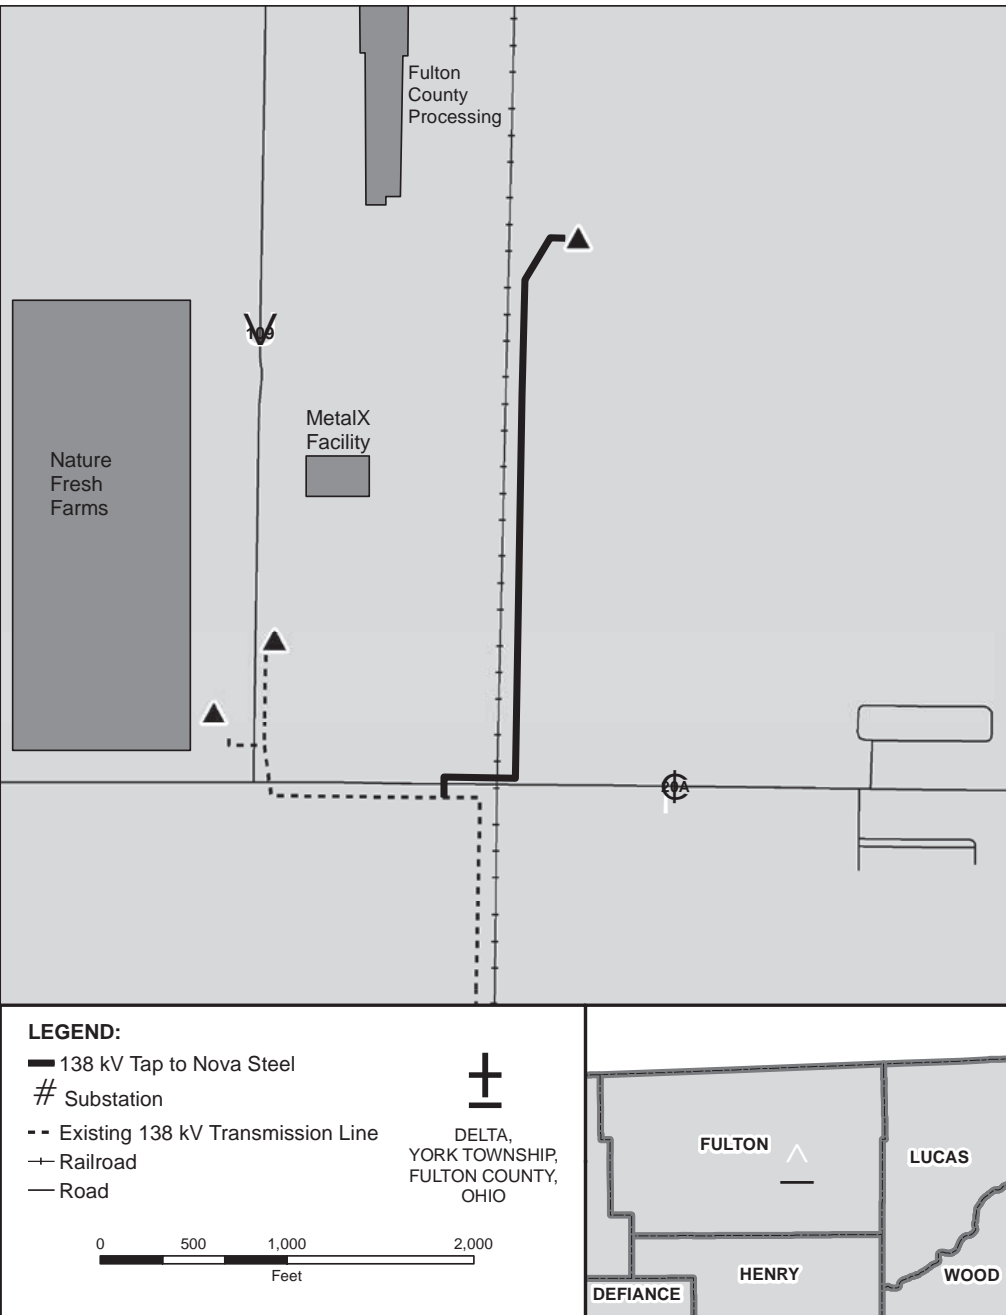

“Is it fair to say you love the man but hate the words he used?” Ms. Copeland asked Mr. Thomas.

He replied: “Yes, ma’am.” Both McMichaels and Bryan were sentenced to life in prison in the state’s murder case. Racist comments by the men weren’t presented as evidence in the murder trial, in which prosecutors downplayed issues of race and focused on proving the three had no justification for pursuing and killing Mr. Arbery.

Parent in college bribery scandal gets 15 months

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A former Staples Inc. executive convicted of trying to bribe his three children’s way into elite universities was sentenced to serve 15 months in federal prison on Wednesday, the longest sentence so far handed down in the sprawling college admissions bribery scandal.

John Wilson, 62, was also ordered to serve two years of supervised release, 400 hours of community service, a fine of $200,000, and $88,546 in restitution to the IRS in the sentence handed down in Boston federal court, per U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts Rachael Rollins’ office.

All told, nearly 60 people were charged in an investigation dubbed by authorities as “Operation Varsity Blues,” including athletic coaches at Georgetown, Yale, and other prestigious schools.

Wilson heads a Massachusetts private equity firm and also previously held top roles at Boston consulting firm Bain and Co., as well as San Francisco-based retail giant Gap Inc. He’s a resident of Lynnfield, just north of Boston.

Wilson was accused of paying $220,000 to have his son designated as a USC water polo recruit, an additional $1 million to buy his twin daughters’ ways into Harvard and Stanford, and then filing a false tax return claiming part of it as a tax write-off.
