I completely oppose this project. I hear a lot of pro solar arguments saying the land will be returned to farmland at the end of the project. If these facilities are going to be the answer to our dependency on fossil fuel, and provide electricity to homes, um why would you ever take them down? If they come down after 40 years, then what? Back to fossil fuels? The farmland will never be returned to farmland. Right now there are over 90,000 acres of farmland just in Ohio that either have projects approved or pending. 90,000 acres that will never be farmland again. I hope solar panels taste good.
