Enter your question or comment	There are numerous stipulations attached to this in the event the board decides to approve. What is the recourse should these stipulations not be met? Not only stipulations required prior to construction, but there were areas of concern post construction. Does the board have any leverage to enforce once it is constructed? My biggest fears are concerning out of control vegetation, and water issues. My company provided maintenance on a 30 acre solar facility. We were never called to mow until they were forced to do so by the city. I cannot imagine 2300 acres of out of control vegetation. One area not addressed was the dormant weed seeds in the soil. There are weeds which can remain dormant for decades. I have yet to see a grass or even CRP ground which survived without intrusion of undesirable plants. I do not foresee this being any different. Similarly, what recourse is there for storm water runoff, damaged tiles, etc? Once constructed, if the company chooses to be non-compliant, is there any remedy in place to enforce compliance of the OPSB stipulations?
