The customer's comments are below:

My husband and I could barely afford to heat our < 800 sq ft house last winter, even after keeping it at 65 degrees or lower and some of the vents shut off in rooms that we rarely use, to try and keep the bill down. We both make well over minimum wage and have no children, how do you expect single parents or low income families to keep their homes at a livable temperature? This hike is literally going to kill people, they're going to try to heat their homes unsafely like with fire or the oven. Their blood will be on Columbia Gas' greedy hands. If only we could use a different gas company, but unfortunately we're forced to use Columbia Gas.

Sincerely,

Mike Lombard
