CUSTOMER COMMENTS:

I'm wondering if Duke Energy raises its rates how people on a fixed income are supposed to afford to pay for utilities? My thermostat in the winter does not go over 64 degrees; in the heat waves we're already having, I use mainly use fans, but when I've had to turn on air conditioning, I've had the thermostat at 80. If I'm not in a room, the lights are off. I'm frugal. I cannot afford to pay more for electricity. Do you want to drive the retired and disabled out of the state with rate hikes? Does Duke not already make a handsome profit? At what temperature do the CEOs at Duke set their thermostats?
