Would you personally want that in your backyard? Think about it. The majority of the people opposed to this project are not against solar power. They are against having it in their backyard. Many people work years or decades to purchase their dream home in a specific location to enjoy the countryside, wildlife, etc. Does a company have the right to take that away? This is a rural area but it is populated. We have heard many times that a solar project of this size has not been established in an area this heavily populated. We believe there are other areas which are less populated that have better feasibility. Please prevent the solar project from becoming a blight on our landscape. Thank you, Mike & Ann Murphy
