DOCKETING CASE #:

SUBJECT: Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company - Protest Rate Case

Good Morning

Today I read an article that under the guise of improving the infrastructure that First Energy (Illuminating Company) wants to increase or add on an extra 4 dollars a month.

Considering the recent issues with First Energy, ie bailout and bribery scandal. How can a consumer have fees added when they can't even trust the company requesting the increase?

Energy bills have skyrocketed enough with First Energy at the helm, how can they possibly expect that this is acceptable?

True the infrastructure is definitely at mercy of the elements, but instead of using the bailout funds they received they lined their own executives pockets. Hence the bribery scandal.

There is no trust in the company and as such these requests should not be allowed. Until the main rates have decreased and the company has proved they have changed course for the best.

NO ON THE INCREASE
